JOHN SHAW,

STOCK and SHARE DEALER,

NOS. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, WARDROBE-CHAMBERS, Doctors'-commons; 4, Haymarket; 165, Queen Victoria-street; 18, Westbourne-grove; Central-chambers, The Quadrant, Brighton; Bridgewater-chambers, 6, Brown-street, Manchester.

JOHN SHAW, in his CIRCULAR issued the 12th June, said: "It is, however, to other securities, i.e., American, that I look for the largest advance in prices, some of the quotations they are at now are simply phenomenal. The 'bears' have worked the markets to their hearts' content, and, aided by the mistaken tactics of the manipulators of the different lines, have had all their own way. The time has come for them to turn round and buy. I foretell a rapid and important advance in American rails, and for preference I would buy Milwaukees and New York Centrals."

AMERICANS had then touched bottom, and are now from 5 to 15 per cent. up, and are still rising, my principal selection, Milwaukee, showing the lead. I also recommended Trunks and South American Stocks, all of which show profits.

MY ADVICES for THIS ACCOUNT and my views as to the probable course of the markets ARE NOW READY.

THE AMOUNT of STOCK which I DEALT in this YEAR up to DATE is FIFTY-FIVE MILLION POUNDS. £55,000,000.

THE RAILWAY TIMES says: "Not only has Mr. Shaw secured the ground floor at Wardrobe-chambers for his suite of offices, but he has consulting rooms in the upper part of the building as well. An establishment like this is princely in itself, but it must be borne in mind that Mr. Shaw has no less than six branches, each of which is fitted up in equally excellent style. These are situate at 4, Haymarket; 165, Queen Victoria-street; 18, Westbourne-grove; the Quadrant, Brighton; and Bridgewater-chambers, Manchester. Well might Mr. Shaw be styled the 'Prince of Stock and Share Dealers.'"

Bankers—Capital and Counties Bank, Ludgate-hill; Capital and Counties Bank, Covent-garden; Capital and Counties Bank, Brighton; Central Bank of London, Newgate-street, E.C. Telephone Numbers—City, 1039; West-end, 3580; Brighton, 165. Telegraphic Addresses—"John Shaw, London"; "John Shaw, Brighton."

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY EVENING.

A further considerable influx of bullion was reported at the Bank of England, and the discount market showed a slightly easier tendency. Choice three months' bills were freely taken at 2⅞ per cent., no transactions being reported at a fraction more, as on Saturday. On the whole, the supply of paper was larger, including drafts from America, and a somewhat increased amount of discount business was done at the Bank. Payments on the Brazilian loan caused an active demand for short advances in the morning at 2½, ¾ per cent., but the bulk of this money was afterwards released by Messrs. Rothschilds, and the rate relapsed to 1½. To-morrow instalments fall due on the Buenos Ayres and Tucuman loans, amounting together to £553,657, and it is stated that a large amount of sovereigns will be sent to Buenos Ayres by the steamer leaving on Sept. 13. Besides additional Argentine provincial issues it is understood that a Monte Videan loan for one million sterling is about to be launched here. As regards future bullion movements the New York Financial Chronicle remarks that, should present views as to the food requirements of Europe be confirmed, there ought to be bills enough on the market through the fall to cause considerable shipments of specie hence. American houses believe, however, that not much gold will be moved, because all the European banks hold their hoards with tenacity. This remark certainly applies to the Continental institutions, and the Bank of England would doubtless raise its minimum upon any indication of a heavy drain. At Berlin the rate of discount has risen to 1⅞ per cent., and a fresh rise is probable, owing to the extent of recent financial operations in Germany and expected further commitments. The Austro-Hungarian Bank has raised its rate from 4 to 4½ per cent. The weekly return of this establishment, just issued, shows an important addition to the other securities.

With the return to town of many of the leading operators, business in public securities has been very active, though prices were irregular. Similar features were apparent on the Continent, the Berlin Bourse being strong, and the Paris and Vienna markets dull. The recovery abroad was to some extent checked by the increased demand for money. On the Stock Exchange during the next three days attention will be partly directed to the settlement, which will be a larger one than for a long time past, through the extent of recent speculative transactions. A strong demand prevailed for English railways, the desire to buy these securities being stimulated by the issue of good traffic returns by the Southern lines. Lancashire and Yorkshire and South-Eastern "A" rose about 2 per cent. each, Sheffield Ordinary, 1½; and North-Western, South-Western, North Staffordshire, Caledonian, North-Eastern, and Chatham Ordinary, 1 each. The closing quotations were about the best. Rumoured negotiations for an advance in rates caused a fresh rise in Grand Trunks, notably in the First Preference, this being nearly 2½ up. The Second and Third improved 1 to 1½, but the Ordinary and Guaranteed were comparatively neglected. An important fall occurred in Mexican (Vera Cruz) stocks, due to reported serious damage to one of the company's bridges from a cyclone. It is also understood that a contract recently entered into for the carriage of railway materials does not exceed about £20,000, and that the Inter-Oceanic line will be completed to Puebla about the end of the year. Meanwhile the engines for the new undertaking are supplied by the United States, and various materials in Mexico itself, only steel rails being required from this country. The First and Second Preferences fell 2½ each and the Ordinary 1½, though the last prices were not the worst. American railroads gave way, but the only special change—$4—took place in Milwaukees. Denvers and Ohios exhibited firmness.

Consols and Colonial Government securities were dull, these being prejudiced by the higher value of money. On the other hand, Rupee stocks were in request, in response to the rise in silver and the Eastern exchanges. In foreign bonds, Egyptian were all rather lower, on the continued fall of the Nile. Hungarian, Italian, Mexican, Portuguese, Russian, and Spanish were offered; but Greek were freely bought, and rose 1 to 1½ per cent. Colombian, Entre-Rios Mortgage, Guatemala, Peruvian, Turkish, and Uruguayan were also higher. Cables and Banks showed a favourable tendency, and Imperial Ottoman improved ½. Amongst miscellaneous, Produce Clearing, South African Exploration, and Hotchkiss advanced, while Spratt's relapsed. The feature in Canals was a fall of ½ in Suez. With one or two unimportant exceptions, the variations in mines were upward. A rise to £105 per ton in Chili bars caused a demand for copper securities, and Tintos, after being dealt in at 23, left off at 22½, or ¼ up on the day. Diamond undertakings were likewise firmer, as well as Indian gold shares.

Bar gold worth £50,000 was bought by the Bank. The Elbe, from New York, has brought £64,000 in silver, and the Ormuz, from Sydney, £31,000 in gold.

Firmer rates of exchange from the East caused an increased demand for bar silver, and the price rose 3-16d. to 42⅜d. per ounce. Bombay and Calcutta transfers improved 1-32d. to 1s 4¼d. An active inquiry prevailed for Rupee Paper; the Four and a Half per Cents. advanced ⅛, to 71⅛, ¼ ex int., and the Four per Cents. ⅛, to 68⅞, ¾. The Council of India made the following special allotments: Bills on Calcutta, £4,000 at 1s 4¼d., and on Bombay, £18,200 at 1s 4¼d., £30,000 at 1s 4 9-32d., and £30,000 at 1s 4 5-16d., making a total of £82,200.

Except a decrease of £707,900 in the note circulation, and £495,350 in the cash in hand, the changes in the return of the Imperial Bank of Germany for the week ended Sept. 7 are unimportant. Bills and public deposits have diminished £297,000, other securities £252,200, notes of other banks £103,100, advances on stocks £67,150, sundry debtors £61,050, sundry securities £17,250, and sundry creditors £6,250. Treasury notes, however, have increased £1,400.

At Vienna money is in better demand, and the weekly statement of the Austro-Hungarian Bank exhibits an increase of £842,700 in the other securities. Notes in circulation have augmented £431,800, and advances £12,400. Silver reserve is larger by £5,800, and gold by £3,400; but foreign bills have decreased £8,200.

Berlin prices were firm, and Prussian, Russian, Spanish, Turkish, Italian, Austrian Credit, and Mexican improved. Egyptian, however, gave way. The Vienna market was dull, and Paris undecided. Suez Canal, Crédit Foncier, Lombardo, and Portuguese receded, while Ottoman Bank, Panama, Rio Tinto, and Greek were higher. The Three per Cent. Rentes, at 84f 47½c, and the Four and a Half per Cent., at 106f 05c, were unaltered. Exchange on London (cheques) rose ½c, to 25f 43c.

According to the following, from the Paris correspondent of the Economist, it is proposed to levy a tax in France on transactions in stocks and shares:

An idea has been put forward, probably suggested by one of Mr. Goschen's recent measures, that the Treasury in its present necessities might obtain a large revenue from a tax on the brokerage of public securities. The total amount of Bourse transactions for money and the account is estimated at 40,000 millions of francs annually, the average brokerage of ⅛ per cent., or 1f 25c per 1,000f, amounting to 50 millions of francs, shared among the agents de change in Paris and the provinces, bankers, coulissiers, &c. The plan which is being discussed in the papers is to increase the brokerage to 2f or 2f 50c per thousand francs, and hand the surplus on the present charge over to the Government. At 2f the surtax would produce thirty millions, and at 2f 50c fifty millions, provided that the tax did not restrict business. To render the scheme less unpalatable to agents de change it would be accompanied by measures to defend their monopoly of dealing in public securities by suppressing the competition of bankers and coulissiers with which they have to contend, and which deprives them of a large share of their legitimate profits.

From a statement issued by Price's Patent Candle Company (Limited) it appears that the manufacturing profit for the six months to June 30 was £30,082, leaving after deducting interest on bonds and income-tax, and including the sum (£3,324) brought down, an available total of £31,836 13s 4d. It is proposed to declare a dividend amounting to £16,750, and to carry forward £15,086 13s 4d.

The Brighton Railway traffic return for the week ended Sept. 8 exhibits an increase of £1,943, and the South-Eastern an increase of £2,968.

Half-yearly coupons of the debentures of the Agricultural Company of Mauritius (Limited) will be payable on and after Sept. 15 at the Alliance Bank.

It is notified that the Mysore Gold Mining Company (Limited) have sold, through Messrs. Johnson, Matthey, and Co., the gold obtained in the month of July, which realised £4,990 16s 6d.

For the week ended Aug. 26 the Smyrna and Cassaba Railway receipts were £2,479, against £2,155 last year. The Lima Railway traffic receipts for the two weeks ended Aug. 12 amounted to £1,431, or £95 more than in 1887. The gross earnings of the Quebec Central Railway for the week ended Aug. 3 were $5,577, against $4,236 in 1887. For the week ended Aug. 21 the Wabash Western Railway receipts amounted to $127,000, or $4,155 more than last year.

The North Metropolitan Tramway return for the past week exhibits an increase of £222; London, £102; Woolwich and South-East London, £19; Dublin, £319; Imperial, £40; Sunderland, £84; Swansea, £34; and Calcutta, £61.

It is intimated that the directors of the Ceylon Tea Plantations Company (Limited) have declared on account of the current year's profits an interim dividend of 6 per ct., free of income-tax, payable on and after Sept. 18.

Advices received by the Carlisle Gold Mining Company (Limited) state that during August the yield of bullion was $20,700, and of concentrates $4,500, making together $25,200, while the working expenses were $15,700.

The traffic receipts of the Brazilian Submarine Telegraph Company (Limited) for the week ended Sept. 7 were £4,863, and those of the Western and Brazilian Telegraph Company (Limited) £4,011.

It is announced that the Transvaal Gold Exploration and Land Company (Limited) have received the following cable: "The yield of gold from last month's working is 285 ounces. Turbine is at work with ten stamps and pans."

The following changes occurred in Public Securities:

SPECIAL MARKET REPORTS—MONDAY.

LONDON CORN EXCHANGE.—At Mark-lane, the grain trade has remained firm, with a quiet business doing. The sales of home-grown wheat in the leading markets of England and Wales during the first two weeks of the season were 34,110 quarters, against 126,254 quarters last year, at at an average of 37s, against 29s 6d; barley 718 quarters, against 10,796 quarters, average 32s 6d, against 27s; and oats 2,125 quarters, against 9,146 quarters, average 19s 9d, against 15s 2d per quarter. English wheat was firm and further advanced 1s per quarter over last Monday's prices. The best white old wheat weighing 61lb was worth about 46s, and red 43s. The new wheat varies very much owing to the bad quality. Foreign wheat was strong at a rise of 1s 6d per quarter on the week. Flour showed a rise of 1s and is a firm market. The top price of town-made flour was advanced [illegible], making the quotation 38s. Barley was steady; malting produce was very strong; grinding rose about 6d to 1s per quarter. Oats were firm at a rise of 6d per quarter. Maize was 6d dearer, with a steady inquiry. Beans and peas were 1s dearer. Egyptian beans, 30s to 30s 6d; Smyrna, 27s to 28s; Monocco, 26s 6d to 27s per 480lb. Baltic peas 33s to 38s; Green Indian, 28s 6d to 29s. Egyptian lentils 2s dearer, at 30s to 33s per 504lb.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE.—The cattle trade has been quiet, with no particular feature. The total number of beasts available was 2,880, of which 200 came from abroad, including 30 from Canada. Scotland sent nothing, Ireland 200, Norfolk, Suffolk and Essex 150, and Midland, Home, and Western counties 2,180. Sales progressed quietly. The choicest Herefords made 5s to 5s 2d, and shorthorns and Devons to 5s 0d to 5s 10d per 8lb. The total number of sheep was 7,310, including 780 foreign. The market was quiet at late rates. The best Downs and half-breds sold at 6s to 6s 2d per 8lb. Calves were quiet at late rates. Pigs sold at previous prices. 50 milch cows made £13 to £23 per head. Statement and comparison of the supplies and prices of stock exhibited and sold in the Metropolitan Cattle Market on Monday, Sept. 12, 1887, and on this day, Monday, Sept. 10, 1888. Stocks of sugar in London, Liverpool, Bristol and Clyde, on Sept. 8	”	183,428	220,803

In the refined market sales to a good extent have been made of medium to fine kinds, at steady to rather firmer prices, but yellows have been dull, and stored goods quiet at late rates. Foreign loaves have been dull of sale, Dutch and Austrian crushed slow, and foreign granulated quiet, with only small sales at previous rates.

COFFEE.—Firm for spot parcels, though with little doing, while in the terminal market a still decline has taken place, the closing official quotations to-day of fair channel Rio being 61s 6d Sept., 57s 6d Oct., 55s Nov., 54s 9d Dec., 54s 6d Jan.-Feb., and 52s 6d March-April.

RICE.—Firm market, and the following sales have been reported, viz., a cargo of 2,100 tons Bassein, April sailing, at 9s 3d open charter, and one of 2,400 tons, hold Siam, September loading, per steamer, at 6s 3d open charter.

COTTON.—Steady for East India.

JUTE.—Firm, at late prices, with sales to a fair extent, while today the market was dearer, and about 4,000 bales sold for arrival to London and Dundee.

OILS.—Linseed—Firm, and quoted at £19 2s 6d for pipes landed, and £19 1s 3d Hull casks on spot. Rape—Dearer, at £26 10s for brown on spot, and £27 10s to £28 for refined. Cotton—Crude, on spot, quoted at £18, refined in ordinary casks at £21, and Hull, spot, dearer, at £20 10s. Turpentine—Dearer on Saturday, at 33s to 33s 3d for American spirit on spot, 33s 7½d for Sept.-Dec., and 34s 6d Jan.-April. Petroleum—Quiet, at about late rates, viz., 7 9-16d to 7½d for American on spot, 7¾d Oct.-Dec., 6¾d Jan.-Feb., with Russian on spot at 6 15-16d to 6¾d.

INDIAN TEA.—Messrs. Gow, Wilson, and Stanton report that the sales yesterday comprised 10,732 packages Indian, and 1,114 packages Java, making a total of 11,846. A slightly better tone prevailed in to-day's sale, and the bidding was fairly brisk, the irregularity noticed last week being less marked. Java.—A representative invoice from the Sinagar Estate was offered, and met with fair competition.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—These pills purify the blood and act most powerfully on the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels, thus giving tone, energy, and vigour to the whole system. They are wonderfully efficacious in all ailments incidental to females, young or old, and as a general family medicine for the cure of most complaints are unequalled.—[ADVERTISEMENT.]

THE NATIONAL DEFENCES.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, will leave London this evening for Edinburgh, in order to commence a tour of inspection in Scotland and the northern counties. After leaving Edinburgh, where his Royal Highness will review the 15th Hussars and the Cameron Highlanders, he will spend several days at Glasgow, going over the defences of the Clyde, which have lately been the subject of much consideration at the War Office, and will review the Seaforth Highlanders, quartered at Maryhill. The Duke will return to Edinburgh on Saturday, and on Monday next will go to Yorkshire to continue his inspections of the various military stations in that county. On the 25th inst. he will be at York to inspect the 10th Hussars, with whom Prince Albert Victor is serving; also the infantry quartered there, and will remain in the north, continuing the inspections, until the end of the month, then returning to London, and subsequently proceeding to Portsmouth, Dover, &c., on official duty.

THE LATE MR. MATTHEW ARNOLD.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—The subscription which was set on foot to keep alive the memory of Mr. Matthew Arnold has now been in course of collection for about two months; and it seems time to remind those who may be desirous of contributing to this object, that in November it is intended to hold a meeting of the subscribers, in order to dispose, as they may direct, of the sum which may have been collected. The objects aimed at by the committee, subject of course to circumstances and to the pleasure of the subscribers, were, first, to place some permanent memorial to Mr. Arnold in Westminster Abbey (the cost of this, including all expenses connected with the Abbey, not to exceed £500); next, to make up, if possible, to Mrs. Arnold the loss of Mr. Arnold's pension, no portion of which has Mr. W. H. Smith thought it right to continue to his widow; and, lastly, after providing for the foregoing objects, and if the sum obtained should be sufficient, to found at Oxford an Arnold Scholarship or Lectureship with a view to promote the study of English literature. It would be altogether improper to anticipate in any way the decision of the subscribers. I would only respectfully ask those who may be intending to contribute, but have not yet contributed to this object, to send their subscriptions either to Messrs. Richard Twining and Co., 215, Strand, W.C., or to G. W. E. Russell, Esq., 18, Wilton-street, S.W. You will greatly oblige me and those with whom I am acting if you will be good enough to insert this letter in your paper. The refusal of Mr. Smith to recognise in any way or to any extent the claims and services of Mr. Arnold renders it more imperative than ever upon his friends to do what they can to show their sense of his genius and his worth.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

COLERIDGE.

Heath's-court, Ottery St. Mary, Devon, Sept. 8.

MARRIED WOMAN'S PROPERTY RIGHTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—In your issue of this date a case is given where it is reported that the magistrate at the Westminster Police-court, Mr. Biron, Q.C., informed an applicant on Saturday last that her husband could legally take everything she had and sell it, although he had left her six months ago, and she had got the home together by her own industry since he went away.

Does not this require some explanation in the face of Section 5 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, which states that property acquired after the Act by a woman married before the Act is to be held by her as a feme sole?—Yours truly,

INQUIRER.

Upper Norwood, Sept. 10.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—Referring to your leading article in to-day's issue on the decision of Mr. Biron that he had no power to grant to two poor women who had applied to him protection orders to prevent their dissolute husbands from selling up the homes which these poor women had got together out of their own earnings, may I draw your attention to Section 5 of the Married Woman's Property Act, 1882 (45 and 46 Vic., c. 75), "Every woman married before the commencement of this Act shall be entitled to have and to hold and to dispose of in manner aforesaid as her separate property all real and personal property, her title to which, whether vested or contingent, and whether in possession, reversion, or remainder, shall accrue after the commencement of this Act, including any wages, earnings, money, and property so gained and acquired as aforesaid, that is (vide Section 2) acquired in any trade, employment, or occupation in which she is engaged, or which she carries on separately from her husband, or by the exercise of any literary, artistic, or scientific skill."

So it seems that a woman who has acquired property after the Act (Aug. 18, 1882) by her own earnings, or work, or otherwise, is fully entitled to it as against her husband, no matter when she was married, and that the date of the acquisition of the property is the question to be decided.—Yours truly,

C. B.

Gresham House, E.C., Sept. 10.

THE REGISTRATIONS.

The revision of the lists of Parliamentary voters and London Council electors was resumed yesterday at the Guildhall, for the City of London. Mr. O. J. Williamson, after some discussion as to the fifteen-mile radius, the boundaries of the new County of London, and the transfer of a number of persons, placed on a list by themselves as being beyond the seven-mile radius before Parliament extended the radius to fifteen miles, to the County list of electors, said he would consider the points involved, and give a written judgment. It was stated that these points affected about 4,000 electors for the London Council.

Mr. George Williamson yesterday commenced the revision of the lists for the seven divisions of the Tower Hamlets at the Board-room, Great Alie-street, Whitechapel. The alien question, which is always an important matter in the Hamlets, early came before the Court upon an objection to Daniel Defries, of 4, Castle-street. It appeared that the Vestry Clerk had issued a circular to various claimants and others who were presumably aliens asking them for information upon the point, and stating that unless satisfactory primâ facie evidence was given of their right to be on the register their names would be omitted. The Liberal agents objected to this circular. The Revising Barrister allowed the claim of Mr. Defries, but stated that the course adopted by the parochial authorities was a most convenient one.

Mr. Algernon Bathurst, the Revising Barrister at Westminster, commenced his revision yesterday at the Town Hall. The Liberals objected to William Henry Campbell, who claimed in respect of the boathouse and premises at St. James's Park. The claimant said that twenty-five years ago he was appointed Queen's waterman to St. James's Park by the Duke of Cambridge for services in the Crimea. Since then he had acquired possession of the boathouse and premises by paying £175 for them. The appointment as waterman was a separate matter. The objection, however, which was for non-occupation, was allowed, but the claimant received 10s for expenses. Mr. Illingworth, M.P., was successfully objected to on the ground that the real occupier of the house in Queen Anne's-mansions he claimed for was his father-in-law, Mr. Holden, M.P. It was stated, in the course of the revision, that policemen, even when householders, were not qualified as county electors.

The revision was also commenced at West Ham (North) and Southwark.

VACATION SITTINGS.—Mr. Justice Denman will be in attendance at Queen's Bench Judges' Chambers this morning as Vacation Judge, in order to hear applications and summonses arising in the Queen's Bench Division. His lordship will sit in Chancery Court 2 to-morrow, at eleven o'clock, to hear Chancery vacation business, of which there is a list of over forty cases entered, a dozen or more of which have been adjourned from previous weeks. Among the cases set down for hearing to-morrow are petitions for winding-up orders in re Jones Brothers (Limited) and the Art Engineering Company (Limited). Among the motions is one for an injunction, on behalf of Miss Edith Woodworth, lessee of the Globe Theatre, to restrain Mr. Charles Sugden, the well-known actor, from acting, or causing his name to be advertised as about to act, at any other place than at the Globe Theatre or otherwise than for the plaintiff until the 29th inst., and in particular from causing his name to be advertised as about to act at the Olympic Theatre prior to the 29th inst. This case is about thirty down in the list. Mr. Justice Denman will attend and hear Chancery chamber summonses on Friday next.

SEWING MACHINE EXHIBITION.—Encouraged by the success which attended a similar effort at the Westminster Aquarium last year Mr. W. M'William has organised at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, a very interesting and instructive exhibition of sewing machines and "domestic appliances." The latter definition is comprehensive enough, and has resulted in the accumulation of a great variety of exhibits well worthy of inspection by housewives of every class who desire to avail themselves of the best and latest mechanical contrivances. Lamps of every description, portable "cookers," household fire-escapes, wringing machines, mangles, toys, knife-cleaners, invalid furniture, automatic musical instruments, and knitting machines are included in the display of novelties. The great feature of the show is, however, the collection of sewing machines, to which most of the leading manufacturers in Great Britain and America contribute, so that intending purchasers of these modern household necessaries may judge for themselves as to the comparative merits and cost of the rival productions. Among other objects which attract special attention is what is believed to be the first sewing machine ever made. It is said to have been constructed from the specification of a workingman named Thomas Saint, which specification was lodged in the Patent Office in 1760, provisional protection being granted under it sixty years before Elias Howe produced his famous machine at Massachusetts. The exhibition, it is announced, will remain open for a fortnight.

PREVIOUS CONVICTIONS.—In the course of a case heard at Hammersmith Police-court, yesterday, a warder came forward to prove a former conviction against the accused, though a constable was in court to give the required evidence. In answer to questions the warder said he identified the prisoner in gaol, and received an order from Scotland-yard to attend at the court to prove the conviction. Mr. Paget said he had heard complaints that warders were removed from their duty to give evidence which could be tendered by a constable. It was very desirable that warders should not be removed from their duty when the convictions could be established by other evidence.

MEDICAL ELECTRICITY.—Harness' Electropathic Belt and Treatment. Sufferers from nervous exhaustion, brain fag, sleeplessness, rheumatic affections, liver and kidney diseases, ladies' ailments, &c., should write for pamphlet and copies of testimonials (post free). "AS COOL AS A CUCUMBER."—Ladies will find "Beetham's Glycerine and Cucumber" delightfully cooling and refreshing if applied to the face and hands after being out in the hot sun, playing lawn tennis, yachting, &c. It preserves the complexion from becoming red or sunburnt, removes all heat and irritation, and keeps the skin soft and white during the hottest weather.—Bottles 1s., 2s. 6d., of all Chemists. Free for 3d. extra, by the sole makers, M. Beetham and Son, Chemists, Cheltenham.—[ADVERTISEMENT.]

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

DONCASTER NOTES.

After the business of Saturday in connection with Ayrshire for the St. Leger there was great anxiety at the clubs this morning to ascertain the latest news concerning him. Telegrams early came to hand that he had done good work, and had started for Doncaster, whereupon he returned to 2 to 1, and made the market easy again as regards Seabreeze and Orbit. This blissful state of affairs for the supporters of the Derby winner did not last long, as before the early break up a fresh fire of opposition broke out, and 5 to 2 was offered in several quarters. The bookmakers at once shortened the prices again of Seabreeze and Orbit, and it then seemed quite on the cards for Lord Calthorpe's filly to assume the leading honour of the market. The second rank were all quiet, and in the case of Zanzibar the opposition was of a somewhat marked character. During the journey from King's-cross by the afternoon special a lot of rain fell, and the same has been the case at Doncaster, so that unless a change takes place in the night the ground will be heavy to-morrow. When the St. Leger candidates do their work, if Seabreeze is not in the early arrival list, Orbit will divide attention to a certain extent with Ayrshire. He has, I learn, finished up his preparation in the most satisfactory manner. The fields, on the whole, may turn out somewhat smaller than last year; and amongst the latest St. Leger scratchings is Aperse, who was entirely put out of court at Derby. Dorothy Draggletail does not run, and as this sets Webb at liberty he might ride one of the Kingsclere horses, while with Woodburn claimed for White Flag, James Goater has been chosen to take his place as the steerer of Love-in-Idleness, and Watts does duty on Stronvar. Before proceeding to the order of the opening day I may mention that Decision, Trayles, Acmé, Kenilworth, and Ténébreuse have touched less than 20 to 1 for the Cesarewitch, and Minting still stands out by himself for the Cambridgeshire. The field for the Great Yorkshire Handicap looks like being fourteen in number. The pair that I have already chosen, ST. HELEN and EXMOOR, may have to fear Button Park, Admiral Benbow, and Dan Dancer. At the same time I shall stand to my guns, and my other selections are: STOURWICK or THE SHREW for the Fitzwilliam Stakes, ABU KLEA or POLYNESIAN for the Doncaster Welter Plate, SWEETBRIAR for the Clumber Plate, CHITABOB for the Champagne Stakes, STRATHBLANE or KING COLE for the Stand Stakes, EULALIA for the Glasgow Plate, and RYDAL for the Filly Stakes.

LONDON BETTING—MONDAY.

The St. Leger market was watched with eagerness to-day, and Ayrshire having galloped before leaving for Doncaster, he at once returned to 2 to 1, while 7 to 2 was offered Seabreeze and 9 to 2 Orbit. A reaction came, and with Ayrshire declining to 5 to 2, Seabreeze was backed at 600 to 200, and four "monkeys" were booked to Orbit. Bar three 20 to 1 was offered, and this price would not tempt backers of either Zanzibar or Ossory. Estafette declined to 25 to 1, and Stronvar was in better request, as 33 to 1 was booked. Love-in-Idleness and Belle Mahone stood at 50 to 1, a price offered against Chillington, and, after the price had been taken about Dorothy Draggletail, she beat a retreat to double the odds, and was voted a non-starter. For the Great Yorkshire Handicap Exmoor and St. Helen held their places at the head of the quotations, and Dan Dancer was next best in demand. For the Cesarewitch Trayles and Decision divided favouritism at 100 to 7, and a point more was booked to each Ténébreuse, Kenilworth, and Acme. Minting again figured as favourite for the Cambridgeshire at 100 to 9. Prices:

CRICKET.

AUSTRALIANS v. SHAW AND SHREWSBURY'S ELEVEN.

Throughout the whole of Sunday rain fell heavily at Leeds, and at noon yesterday the Holbeck ground was soaked. An inspection proved that play would be impossible, and it was decided to postpone a start until to-day, when, should the weather prove favourable, play will commence at twelve o'clock.

SURREY v. TWENTY COLTS.

This benefit match for the ground bowlers engaged at Kennington Oval was commenced yesterday. The weather was anything but favourable, consequently there was only a small attendance of spectators. Rain also stopped play during the day. The Colts batted first, and remained at the wickets throughout the day, completing their innings for 146 runs. The venture contained no special feature, Adams being top scorer with 23, Cooper coming next with a contribution of 21. Only five batsmen secured double figures. Beaumont, who was the seventh bowler put on, was most successful, taking nine wickets in thirty-six overs at a cost of only 26 runs; Sharpe bowled well, and was credited with four for 44 runs. The Eleven commence their innings to-day at 11.30. Score:

LONDON ROWING CLUB.

The annual twelve-oared contest promoted by the members of this prominent metropolitan club was decided last evening over the customary course on an ebb tide, Chiswick Ferry to Putney Bridge. Two crews competed, stroked by G. B. James and C. C. Vaux, and after a stubborn race the former won by a clear length. Mr. F. Playford, sen., was starter, Mr. F. Adcock umpire, and Mr. John Moore distance judge. Details: Middlesex Station—A. W. Bremner (bow), A. Gilmour, H. Benson, C. [illegible], J. Lauman, W. Coulson, J. Baker, W. E. Pete, H. Shurren, C. N. Dowell, H. J. Hill, G. B. James (stroke), W. F. Sheard (cox.), 1. Surrey Station—J. E. Laren (bow), F. W. Bishop, A. Hughes, F. C. Crean, W. C. Rivett, W. H. Well, A. B. Barton, E. P. Bilbrough, W. R. Lyne, A. Lawless, L. M'Lean, C. C. Vaux (stroke), V. Weston (cox.), 0. At the first attempt Bremner, in James's boat, caught a crab, and breaking the string of his rowlock, he jumped overboard, and the umpire restarted the boats. At the second time of asking a good start was effected, and a hard race followed; Vaux always being in front down to Walden's Wharf. From here, however, James made his effort, and rapidly drawing away eventually won a pretty race by a clear length. Time 12min. 7sec.

THE PUGILIST AND HIS ENGAGEMENT.—At Birmingham, yesterday, Thomas Withers, the well-known pugilist of Dudley, who was arrested on Sunday night on a charge of being about to commit a breach of the peace, was brought before the stipendiary. Evidence was given that Withers had been matched against Johnson, of Hackney, for £100 and the 8st 10lb championship, and that there was reason to believe that the fight was arranged to take place in Birmingham, and thereupon the stipendiary decided to bind Withers over in his own recognisances in £50 to keep the peace generally, and towards Johnson in particular. At this announcement Withers stood up in the dock, and said to the stipendiary, "If I am released to-day they will make me fight," and showed by his behaviour that he was disinclined to fulfil the contract. The prisoner's wife also appeared in front of the dock, and begged the stipendiary to keep her husband in custody until the day was over, because if he got out he would be sure to fight, and she did not want him to do that. The stipendiary suggested that he should adjourn the case till to-morrow, and that the man should be kept in custody. To this course the prisoner readily assented, in fact, he said he should like it.—The Stipendiary: "The fact is, I suppose, you don't want to be compelled to fight."—Prisoner: "That's it, sir."—Very well, then, you are remanded until to-morrow morning.

A SINGULAR BLUNDER.—Yesterday information reached the Wandsworth Police-court, by telegram from Guy's Hospital, that Edgar Woolley, an assistant to his brother, a draper, of High-street, Merton, who was shot by James Young, the father of a young woman in the same employ, was in a dying condition. Although there was a long list of summonses to be heard, the business was at once suspended, and Mr. Plowden, the magistrate, attended the hospital, where, on arrival, Woolley was found sitting up in bed in the accident ward, and apparently going on well. Woolley's friends had been also communicated with by telegram, and arrived in quick succession, expecting to find the patient in a precarious condition. Explanations were demanded for this extraordinary blunder on the part of the officials, and a nurse explained that another man, who was also suffering from a bullet wound, had died, and the name of Woolley was communicated by mistake.

SEALSKIN GARMENTS and LADIES' FURS at half-price. Alaska sealskin Ruttenherps(?), £6, £7, and £8 each; sealskin paletots, from £2, half price. Gents' fur-lined coats, £5 and £6. An immense quantity of boas and all kinds of furs, carriage and hearthrugs, ladies' fur-lined cloaks, to be sold regardless of cost.—Phillips' City Fur Warehouse, 52, 53, Newgate-st., our only address.—[ADVT.]

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth; it relieves the little sufferer at once, it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is perfectly harmless, and very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes.—Sold by all Chemists at 1s. 1½d. per bottle.—[ADVT.]

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MANSION HOUSE.—A QUESTION OF REPRESENTATION.—Richard Montauns, an agent, was charged, on remand, before Alderman Sir John Ellis with obtaining a quantity of cotton prints, of the value of £400, by false pretences.—Mr. Goldberg, solicitor, conducted the prosecution; Mr. Wilson defended.—The prosecutors were Messrs. Roff and Co., who carry on business near Cologne, and they had an agent in London named Buchanan, who, however, in March last retired from his business as an agent. It was alleged on the part of the prosecution that the defendant had written to the prosecutors in the name of Mr. Buchanan, without that gentleman's knowledge, asking in substance that the goods in question might be sent to Allen and Co. It was stated that the defendant was himself Allen and Co. After a good deal of correspondence had passed the prosecutors ultimately forwarded the goods to London, and the defendant then obtained an advance of £100 upon them. The prosecutors subsequently made inquiries about the goods, and the present proceedings were commenced against the defendant. The circumstances of the case were of a somewhat complicated character. Some evidence was given in support of the charge, and the further hearing of the case was adjourned.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.—THE DETECTIVE IN THE HAMPER.—William Hulks, 23, and Alfred Blundell, 24, silver polishers, were charged with stealing since March last 100 ounces of silver, value £20, the property of their employer, George Wilkinson, a silversmith, of 33, Gerrard-street, Soho. The case for the prosecution was that owing to silver to a considerable amount having been missed during the past few months the services of Detective Holder were enlisted. The officer was placed in a large hamper in a room overlooking the shop where the prisoners were employed. Watching through the wickerwork he saw Hulks go to a sliding pigeon-hole that communicated with the counting-house. He put his left arm through the hole, pulled back the catch of the counting-house door, walked in, opened a drawer, took out a piece of silver, and returned to the work-hop, closing the door after him. He handed the silver to Blundell. The detective and a constable then entered the shop, and charged the prisoners. Nothing was found upon them at the police-station.—Mr. Wallis, for the defence, said he should reserve his cross-examination.—Remanded.

WESTMINSTER.—A WOULD-BE SUICIDE.—William Charlton, a well-dressed young man, described as a servant, living in the Pavilion-road, Chelsea, was charged, before Mr. D'Eyncourt, with attempting to commit suicide by swallowing a quantity of oxalic acid. Mr. Frank V. Needham, doctor's assistant, deposed that at one o'clock on Monday morning he was called to prisoner, who he found lying on a bed suffering from oxalic acid poisoning. He recovered after antidotes.—Prisoner said he had been out of place a long time, and he felt very miserable.—Constable Wild, 467 B, stated that he found several letters in the prisoner's room, one dated Sunday, faintly written in pencil, addressed to his sister, containing affectionate reference to a young woman. He wrote: "Tell her I thought of her to the last, for if I had only been good we might have been so happy together. I should so much like you to be friendly with her, as she is so good. She was quite right in giving me up, but you won't refuse to do what I ask for the last time, and tell her from me that I hope she will get some real good young man who is worthy of her."—The accused was remanded so that he might have the benefit of the chaplain's advice.

CLERKENWELL.—THE DEMONSTRATION AT CLERKENWELL-GREEN.—David Fitzpatrick, 47, of 178, St. Alban's-buildings, Gray's Inn-road, a tailor, was charged by the police before Mr. Bros, with using language which was calculated to excite a breach of the peace, at Clerkenwell-green on Sunday afternoon. Mr. Poland prosecuted on behalf of the Treasury.—An open-air meeting was held on Clerkenwell-green on Sunday afternoon. In the course of his speech Fitzpatrick used language of a violent character, and in consequence of some of the expressions he used, two or three persons complained to Police-inspector Bradley, who caused the prisoner to be taken into custody. After abusing the Queen and members of the Royal family, using the coarsest language, Fitzpatrick began to refer to the police and to the question of the right of meeting at Trafalgar-square. He said, "You have a right to hold your meetings at Trafalgar-square. I advise you to go there armed, and, if the police interfere with you, pull your weapons out of your pockets and use them on the scoundrels and bloodhounds. The aristocracy of the West-end, and the — — Prince of Wales and all members of Parliament, must not stop you from going there." Referring to Ireland and the Irish landlords, he said, "I hope that every one of them (using an oath) will be shot before long, and if all the police are shot with them it will only be what they deserve."—The prisoner, in reply to the charge, denied that he had used the language attributed to him.—Mr. Bros remanded Fitzpatrick for a week, on bail.

THAMES.—CHARGE OF ATTEMPTED MURDER.—William Seaman, 40, of peculiar appearance, and described as a builder, of 11, Prince's-street, Whitechapel, was charged with attempting to kill and slay John Simkin, chemist, of 82, Berner-street, Whitechapel.—The prosecutor was too ill to attend on account of the severe injuries he had received.—Charles M'Carthy, a labourer, of 11, Ellen's-place, Ellen-street, Whitechapel, stated about twelve o'clock on Saturday night he was walking along Ellen-street. He heard a scream in the direction of Berner-street. Witness then went to a chemist's shop at 82, Berner-street, kept by prosecutor. Simkin, whose head was bleeding, was behind his counter, and the prisoner was standing in the shop. The former said to witness, "Here is the hammer he hit me with," and he then handed him the hammer produced. The prisoner did not make any remark, neither did he attempt to make his escape.—Witness could not say if he had been drinking. The police then came and took the accused into custody.—Constable 85 H said prosecutor, who was an elderly man, was lying at home dangerously injured. When the prisoner was arrested he said "I shan't tell you what I did it for, but I will tell the magistrate." He had been drinking.—Mr. Saunders ordered the prisoner to be remanded for a week.

LAMBETH.—THE ALLEGED ATTEMPT TO SHOOT A FATHER.—Frederick James Percival, 27, clerk, was charged, on remand, before Mr. Biron, Q.C., with attempting to shoot his father, Frederick Henry Percival, by discharging a revolver at him at 14, Talma-road. The facts have been reported.—Mr. Biron now said that he was informed the prison doctor had failed to find symptoms to lead him to suppose the prisoner was insane. It was a case, therefore, he must send for trial.—The prisoner said he had no intention of hurting his father or any one else. If he had any desire to do any harm it was only to himself.—Mr. Biron fully committed the prisoner for trial.

HAMMERSMITH.—THE MAGISTRATE AND THE SCHOOL BOARD.—A batch of School Board summonses came on for hearing. In one case the mother attended with an infant in her arms. She stated that she kept her daughter, twelve years of age, at home to mind the baby.—Mr. Paget said it was a good reason for keeping the child at home. It had been decided by one of the judges to be a reasonable excuse. He dismissed the summons.—In another case Mr. Ware, the superintendent, said there was a husband.—Mr. Paget said he could not look after the baby.—The summons in that case was also dismissed.—In a third case the mother produced a medical certificate, stating that the child was suffering from congestion of the brain, probably due to school work.—Mr. Ware said it was not consistent with the attendance.—Mr. Paget dismissed the summons.—In several cases fines were imposed.

HIGHGATE.—ANCIENT TOLL RIGHTS.—Henry Cooper, a young man in the employ of a manufacturer of "fairy lights" at Child's-hill, Hendon, was charged before Mr. Glover and Dr. Orton, on a summons taken out by Mr. Salmon, licensed victualler and proprietor of the Gate House Hotel, Highgate, with assaulting William Bevis.—The Gate House Hotel is held under a lease from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and one of the clauses of the lease gives the landlord the right to levy tolls on certain vehicles passing along the North-road at that spot, the toll having been first instituted at the time when the road was made through what was then the Bishop of London's estate at Highgate. There is a toll-bar outside the Gate House Hotel. The road is maintained by the local authorities. In the case now before the Bench it appeared that the present proprietor of the Gate House Hotel had supplied William Bevis, a paralysed man, with toll tickets, and authorised him to demand a toll of 2d on vehicles used for trading purposes not belonging to Highgate. Bevis was allowed by Mr. Salmon to keep what he got for himself, because of his affliction. The amount received was said to vary from 6d to 1s a day. Twopence was demanded by Bevis from defendant as the latter was leading his horse and van past the Gate House Hotel. Defendant refused to pay, and Bevis seized the horse's head. As he would not leave go, defendant, who had not observed that he was paralysed, pushed him down backwards on to the pavement.—Defendant said that several of the vans belonging to the firm by which he was employed went along that road at different times, and the carmen told him they had never been asked for toll. He offered Bevis his name and address.—The Bench fined defendant 2s 6d and costs, Mr. Glover remarking that he could not understand the toll and its collection on the terms stated.

STRATFORD PETTY SESSIONS.—RAID ON BURGLARS.—Henry Smith, 18, Edward Thomas Heard, 22, labourers, and William Burrows, 22, a fishmonger, all of 5, White's-row, Spitalfields, were charged with being concerned together in feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling-house of Thomas Watson Francis, at Dudley Cottage, New Wanstead, and stealing therefrom a quantity of wearing apparel, 550 cigars, eleven fish knives, eleven forks, a carver and fork, and other articles valued at £12.—Prosecutor's house was entered on Saturday night. An examination of the place was made, and the articles mentioned in the charge were found to be missing. Some of them now produced with other property were found at the prisoners' lodging.—Detective-sergeant Leach, H Division, said that he had been keeping observation on the prisoners, and on Sunday at noon he saw them smoking cigars in Spitalfields. They went to a common lodging-house at White's-row, and at a quarter-past four o'clock in the afternoon witness, with other officers, went to the house and saw the three prisoners. He asked if they had any property in their lockers that did not belong to them. They replied "No," but witness said he should search all the lockers in the kitchen. A key was obtained for No. 32 locker, used jointly by the prisoners, and in this receptacle were found some lady's underclothing, table napkins, stockings, ash-trays, and other articles that had not been identified. On the top of the locker was a cane. The men were told they would be charged on suspicion of stealing the things, and after they were taken to the station a room occupied by Burrows was examined, the articles discovered including underclothing, cigars, a knife, a life-preserver, a jemmy, a revolver loaded in five chambers, and four card-counters, all except the underclothing being between the bed and the mattress. At the station Smith was found to be wearing a shirt and a hat identified as belonging to the prosecutor.—The prisoners were remanded.

Referring to the letter published in our issue of the 7th inst. from Mr. W. H. Gibbs, formerly a partner in the firm of Gibbs and Flew, Mr. J. P. Flew now writes: "I shall feel obliged if you will allow me to say that Mr. Gibbs is quite correct when he states that the dissolution of our partnership was advertised at the formation of the limited company, but, unfortunately for me, it was never carried into effect."

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by grocers, in packets labelled James Epps and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London.—[ADVT.]

THE GREAT RAILWAY RACE.—The competition for speed is a cause of much anxiety in a train race, and there are few things that turn the hair of the human race white or faded grey so quickly as worry and anxiety. On the other hand, there is nothing that will restore grey hair to its natural colour so quickly as Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer, which has a world-wide reputation. Sold everywhere.—[ADVERTISEMENT.]

THE WHITECHAPEL MURDER.

INQUEST AND ARRESTS.

A REWARD OFFERED.

In the course of yesterday several apprehensions were made of persons suspected of complicity in the Whitechapel murders, and the excitement in that part of London showed few signs of abating. Generally the men apprehended were able to give satisfactory accounts of themselves. A good deal of interest was caused by the report that "Leather Apron" had been arrested. By common consent on the part of the women of the locality a man who bears this nickname has been believed to be guilty of at least two of the four murders which have recently happened in Whitechapel. He has been repeatedly described by women who have asserted that they have been accosted by him; but it is by no means certain that all the complainants refer to the same individual. So much has been talked about "Leather Apron" in the neighbourhood, that many persons who had never previously heard of his doings appear to have accustomed themselves to the idea that they had actually seen him. It is not unreasonable to suppose that in a district where cabinet and shoe makers constantly wear such aprons more than one man may have been called by the name which has lately produced so much terror in and around Spitalfields. It was stated in The Daily Telegraph yesterday that the police had certain information about a man known to them as "Leather Apron" which it was not politic to divulge. The appearance, manner of life, and characteristics of the person in question were familiar to one of the local officers, who recollected him as having been a denizen of Whitechapel for many years. Some details of the man's past history, according to many householders, do not bear description. One gentleman yesterday stated that he had had reason to thrash "Leather Apron" some four years since, and several stories are told attributing to him shameful conduct; but those people who had most reason to rejoice that a "pestilent fellow," as they described him, had been apprehended, were careful to add that in no case of annoyance to women had he been detected in offering violence to them such as had been attributed to the perpetrator of the Whitechapel murders. Further, those who were more or less familiar with his ways of life inclined to the opinion that he was of too weak a frame, and too cowardly a nature, to commit such aggravated assaults as those which had been perpetrated upon the bodies of Mary Nicholls and Annie Chapman. The police authorities, however, determined that a "Leather Apron" should be apprehended, and it was left in the hands of Detective Thicke to carry out the order. This officer has the reputation of being a highly intelligent member of the force, and one well acquainted with the East-end. These advantages, however, for several days served him in but little stead. "Leather Apron" had disappeared from his old haunts, and he was reported to have been seen south of London Bridge and also in Leather-lane, and other parts of the metropolis with which he was familiar.

Early yesterday morning information was received which gave a clue to the supposed offender's whereabouts. Accordingly at a quarter to nine Sergeant Thicke proceeded to Mulberry-street, Commercial-road East, which is a quarter principally occupied by foreign workers in tailoring, bootmaking, and slipper making. Large numbers of the stage shoes worn in Continental as well as London theatres are made here. The two-storey houses of brick are let out to many persons, but there is an air of industry about the place, and the residents appear to be earning fairly good wages. At No. 22, Mulberry-street, lives a Mrs. Piser, an old woman of seventy. She is stepmother to John Piser, the alleged "Leather Apron," and his married brother Gabriel, who lives at the house. It is stated that John Piser did not reside at his step-mother's, although he frequented the street. He appears to have slept at common lodging-houses, and picked up a living at the slipper trade, at which he was an adept. He was not in regular employment, but two men who have occasionally given him work testify to his good character as a workman. One of these, a Mr. Cohen, says that Piser put in an appearance in Mulberry-street on Thursday last, and remained there without showing any signs of uneasiness. He read the papers closely, for he was an active politician. Piser, some of his friends say, was aware that he was supposed—rightly or wrongly—to be "Leather Apron," and that there was a strong feeling growing up against him. On Friday night, at ten o'clock, he was seen in the street, and Mr Cohen again met him on Saturday morning, when his appearance betrayed nothing of a suspicious character. Piser himself opened the door when Detective Thicke knocked, and it is said that he turned very pale when he recognised the officer, whom he had encountered on a previous occasion, and that he exclaimed, "Mother, he has got me," or used words to that effect. The detective told him for what purpose he came, but put no questions, and Piser offered no explanation, and made no resistance. He was led to Leman-street Police-station unperceived until close to the door of the station, when the cry was raised "Leather Apron!" and, as usual, there was a hostile demonstration. When interrogated the police admitted that they had arrested him, but the day passed without the prisoner having been charged. It was reported on some show of authority that the man had been confronted with witnesses, who failed to recognise him as the character they had known, and it was rumoured that he had been released, much to the satisfaction of his co-religionists, who refuse to believe that a man of Piser's intelligence could be guilty of such ferocity. In the expectation that Piser would return to Mulberry-street a mob not altogether friendly gathered to give him a reception, but they waited for his appearance in vain, for Piser remained at Leman-street Police-station at the hour when it was published abroad that he had been discharged. Upon searching his effects five knives were found, and of these the police took possession; but they were of the pattern used by boot finishers, and are without handles, consisting of curved blades of steel, eight inches long, sharpened at one end, but not to a keen edge. A man of Piser's class usually owns five or six of these tools. A "clicker" is also furnished with a much more formidable instrument, having a hafted blade about five inches long and half an inch broad, curved like a foreign dagger, with a sharp saw-like edge, but apparently not much stronger than an ordinary pocket knife. Piser would not have possessed one of these weapons. His relatives, when questioned about the incident, gave a few meagre particulars. The stepmother says he is thirty-five or thirty-six years of age, and had been at her house since Thursday. He was unmarried, and not very bright in his intellect. He was always welcome, but he was never asked where he had been when he came. The sister declared that Piser was not a man to commit murder, and she was accustomed to trust her children to his charge. He had been ill, and was treated at some hospital, and was afterwards sent to a convalescent home. She had never heard of the name of "Leather Apron," but of course he wore one occasionally. Mr. Nathan, the father of Mrs. Piser, [illegible] had given the man work. Both women [illegible] positive that Piser came home at [illegible] ten on Thursday night, and had not left the house since. He lost his father [illegible] years ago. Piser is a dark man, of [illegible], with small moustache, and side whiskers, and his hair is turning grey. There is [illegible] accent about his talk, and it is said [illegible] was born in England. Piser is not able [illegible] work by reason of physical infirmity. [illegible] at a public house in the street says he [illegible] known Piser for twenty-six years. It has [illegible] that the police were, on the result of [illegible] inquiries prepared to release Piser, but [illegible] man was reluctant to face a crowd of antagonists.

At a late hour last night the man Piser, or "Leather Apron," was still detained at Leman-street Police Station. The police meanwhile are busily engaged in prosecuting their inquiries with respect to his recent proceedings, as to which apparently a good deal remains to be cleared up. It is not yet possible to say whether Piser is the "Leather Apron" who is believed to have perpetrated the recent outrages, but his remarkable likeness to the suspected individual is held to justify the most searching investigation. Whether, however, Piser will be brought before a magistrate to-day is regarded as exceedingly problematical. In the meantime Pigott, who was arrested at Gravesend and brought to the Commercial-street Police-station, has been sent to the infirmary, where he will be kept under close observation. Throughout yesterday a number of conflicting reports were in circulation as to the arrests of various individuals. Among other things it was asserted that Piser had been discharged from custody, and that the real "Leather Apron" had been arrested and brought to Bethnal-green police-station. On inquiry this statement proved to be altogether without foundation. It probably originated in the fact that some man of questionable appearance was brought to the Bethnal-green Police-station on Sunday night, but was discharged early on Monday morning, as there was no ground for believing that he had any connection with the Whitechapel tragedies. The truth is that public feeling in the district is so excited that any circumstance, however trivial, is magnified into an event of importance. All day yesterday the police-stations were surrounded by crowds of people, anxious, if possible, to learn "something fresh" about the results of the detectives' work. There was naturally a good deal of excitement when the arrest of Piser, the alleged "Leather Apron," was announced, but the conflicting rumours which were subsequently published with reference to further arrests created a good deal of confusion in the public mind. The scene of the latest murder was yesterday still visited by large numbers of people, while groups of men and women hung about the street corners discussing the details of the tragedy. As for the police, they have been inconveniently worried by inquiries, while they have also received a good deal of gratuitous information, which has, unhappily, proved of little value. Last night, at a late hour, there were still a few idlers around the police-stations, but there are signs that the excitement of the last three days is gradually waning.

A meeting of the chief local tradesmen in Whitechapel was held yesterday, at which an influential committee was appointed, consisting of sixteen well-known gentlemen, with Mr. J. Aarons as the secretary. Last evening they issued a notice stating that they will give a substantial reward for the capture of the murderer or for information leading thereto. The movement has been warmly taken up by the inhabitants, and it is regarded as certain that a large sum will be subscribed within the next few days. The proposal to form district vigilance committees also meets with great popular favour, and is assuming practical form. Meetings were held at the various working men's clubs and other organisations, political and social, in the district, at most of which the proposed scheme was approved and volunteers enrolled.

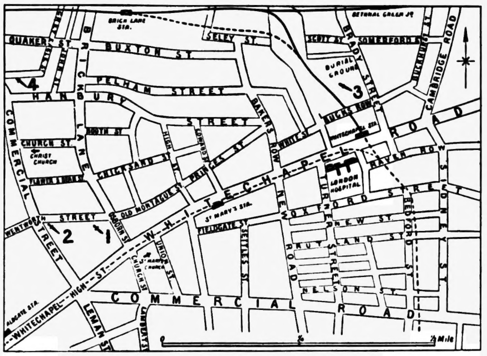
Sir Charles Warren resumed his duties at Scotland-yard yesterday morning, and during the day conferred with some of the chief officials.

About the hour that Piser was arrested in Whitechapel a telegram was received at Scotland-yard notifying that a very suspicious character had been taken into custody at Gravesend. The man was arrested on Sunday night by Police-constable Vellensworth "on information received," in the Pope's Head Tavern in that town, and his appearance and demeanour somewhat justified the course taken. He gave the name of William Henry Pigott, and seemed to be about forty years of age. He was in a very dirty state, which he explained was due to his having tramped from London. Upon his clothing were many stains, apparently of blood, and his shirt was torn and dirty. The forefinger of his left hand was badly wounded, and he had other suspicious marks about him. On being pressed Pigott showed considerable trepidation, and trembled constantly, either from fear or from the effects of drink. He admitted that he was in Whitechapel on the Saturday morning, not far from the scene of the murder, and that he had an altercation with a woman, in the course of which his finger was bitten. Detective-Inspector Abbeline, of Scotland-yard, proceeded to Gravesend, and on seeing the prisoner was struck with his resemblance to the man who entered the Prince Albert public-house in Whitechapel on Saturday morning, in company, it is said, with the murdered woman, and of whom a description had been issued by the police, on information supplied by Mrs. Fiddymont, the landlady. Pigott was removed, under police escort, to London, and not long after his arrival it was ascertained, practically beyond doubt, that he slept at a common lodging-house in Whitechapel on Friday last. Pigott's condition did not improve during the journey from Gravesend, and when he arrived, in custody of Inspector Abbeline, at Commercial-street Police-station, he was in a state closely resembling that of a man recovering from delirium tremens. He had assumed a sullen demeanour, and refused to speak a word to anybody. The first official to examine the prisoner was Dr. Phillips, the divisional police surgeon. The stains on the man's clothing were closely investigated by means of the microscope, and pronounced to be blood. His boots were taken off and subjected to a minute examination, with the result that they also were declared to be stained with blood, the traces of which the long walk from London to Gravesend had failed to efface. At a quarter-past two the prisoner was placed among a number of other men, and Mrs. Fiddymont and other witnesses who had noticed the mysterious customer at the Prince Albert Tavern, were called in, and one after another inspected the row of men drawn up before them. Not one of the witnesses was able to identify Pigott as the man wanted. A short while later the man was examined by the divisional surgeon and pronounced to be a lunatic. A certificate was made out that he might be sent to a lunatic asylum and kept under observation.

Our Windsor correspondent telegraphs: "From inquiries made by Superintendent Hayes, of the Windsor police, there is every reason to believe that the murdered woman was the widow of a coachman named Chapman, formerly in the service of a gentleman living near the Royal borough, and not of a veterinary surgeon, as stated. Her husband held a most excellent position, but she appears to have become very dissipated while with him, and he was at last reluctantly obliged to dissociate himself from her. She lived for a time at Windsor, and eventually quitted that town for London. One of her children, a girl, was educated at a highly-respectable ladies' school in the Royal borough, the cost of her tuition being defrayed by the victim's sister. Chapman was taken ill two years ago, when the remittances sent to his wife seem to have ceased. During his sickness a wretched-looking woman, having the appearance of a tramp, called at the Merry Wives of Windsor, in the Spital-road, and inquired where he was living. She said that she was his wife, and that she had walked down from London, and had slept at a lodging house in Colnbrook. On her way she also stated that, having been told that her husband, who had discontinued sending her 10s a week, was ill, she had come to Windsor to ascertain if the report was true, and not merely an excuse for failing to send her the money as usual. The woman quitted the house shortly afterwards, and the landlord did not see her again. Chapman died over eighteen months ago, and there is little doubt that since his decease the unfortunate woman has had to depend upon her own resources for a livelihood."

At the Working Lads' Institute, Whitechapel-road, yesterday morning, Mr. Wynne Baxter opened an inquiry into the circumstances attending the death of Annie Chapman, a widow, whose body was found horribly mutilated in the back yard of 29, Hanbury-street, Spitalfields, early on Saturday morning. The jury viewed the corpse at the mortuary in Montague-street, but all evidences of the outrage to which the deceased had been subjected were concealed. The clothing was also inspected, and subsequently the following evidence was taken.

AREA OF THE MURDERS.



The above chart exhibits the locality, a little to the north of Whitechapel-road, within which, during the last nine months, four women of the unfortunate class have been foully done to death; and also shows the precise spot where each murder was committed, indicated by a dagger and a numeral.

Figure 1, with the symbol mentioned, marks the ground in the vicinity of Osborn-street and Wentworth-street where, last Christmas week, the body of a woman was found with a stake or iron instrument thrust through her. The identity of this woman still remains in obscurity, and the event created little or no sensation, the crime being attributed to a drunken brawl with some of the lawless ruffians who infest the purlieus of Whitechapel.

Dagger No. 2 denotes the place, near the corner of Wentworth-street and Commercial-street, where the second of this series of horrible tragedies occurred. On Aug. 7—scarcely more than a month ago—the body of a woman named Martha Turner, aged thirty-five, a hawker, was discovered lying dead on the first-floor landing of some model dwellings known as George-yard-buildings, Commercial-street, Spitalfields. No fewer than thirty-nine stab wounds were discovered on the corpse of this unfortunate woman, and it was suggested at the inquest that some of them had been done with a bayonet. A verdict was returned of "Wilful murder against some person or persons unknown." Reference was made during this inquiry to the similarity of the crime to that previously mentioned, and from this date feelings of mingled terror and indignation prevailed among the inhabitants.

Figure 3 indicates the spot in Buck's-row, where, in the early hours of Friday, Aug. 31, was discovered the shockingly mutilated body of Mary Ann Nicholls.

The latest in the sanguinary catalogue of East-end crimes, the murder of Annie Chapman—the precise locality of which, in Hanbury-street, is indicated by the number 4—has been described in yesterday's Daily Telegraph. It will be noted that the dotted line marks the course of the railway which runs underground, and the plain line that which is above the level road.

John Davies deposed: I am a carman employed at Leadenhall Market. I have lodged at 29, Hanbury-street for a fortnight, and I occupied the top front room on the third floor with my wife and three sons, who live with me. On Friday night I went to bed at eight o'clock, and my wife followed about half an hour later. My sons came to bed at different times, the last one at about a quarter to eleven. There is a weaving shed window, or light, across the room. It was not open during the night. I was awake from three a.m. to five a.m. on Saturday, and then fell asleep until a quarter to six, when the clock at Spitalfields Church struck. I had a cup of tea and went downstairs to the back yard. The house faces Hanbury-street, with one window on the ground floor and a front door at the side leading into a passage which runs through into the yard. There is a back door at the end of this passage opening into the yard. Neither of the doors was able to be locked, and I have never seen them locked. Any one who knows where the latch of the front door is could open it and go along the passage into the back yard.

When you went into the yard on Saturday morning was the yard door open or shut?—I found it shut. I cannot say whether it was latched—I cannot remember. I have been too much upset. The front street door was wide open and thrown against the wall. I was not surprised to find the front door open, as it was not unusual. I opened the back door, and stood in the entrance.

Will you describe the yard?—It is a large yard. Facing the door, on the opposite side, on my left as I was standing, there is a shed, in which Mrs. Richardson keeps her wood. In the right-hand corner there is a closet. The yard is separated from the next premises on both sides by close wooden fencing, about 5ft 6in high.

The Coroner: I hope the police will supply me with a plan. In the country, in cases of importance, I always have one.

Inspector Helson: We shall have one at the adjourned hearing.

The Coroner: Yes; by that time we shall hardly require it.

Examination resumed: There was a little recess on the left. From the steps to the fence is about 3ft. There are three stone steps, unprotected, leading from the door to the yard, which is at a lower level than that of the passage. Directly I opened the door I saw a woman lying down in the lefthand recess, between the stone steps and the fence. She was on her back, with her head towards the house and her legs towards the wood shed. The clothes were up to her groins. I did not go into the yard, but left the house by the front door, and called the attention of two men to the circumstances. They work at Mr. Bailey's, a packing-case maker, of Hanbury-street. I do not know their names, but I know them by sight.

The Coroner: Have the names of these men been ascertained?

Inspector Chandler: I have made inquiries, but I cannot find the men.

The Coroner: They must be found.

Witness: They work at Bailey's; but I could not find them on Saturday, as I had my work to do.

The Coroner: Your work is of no consequence compared with this inquiry.

Witness: I am giving all the information I can.

The Coroner (to witness): You must find these men out, either with the assistance of the police or of my officer.

Examination resumed: Mr. Bailey's is three doors off 29, Hanbury-street, on the same side of the road. The two men were waiting outside the workshop. They came into the passage, and saw the sight. They did not go into the yard, but ran to find a policeman. We all came out of the house together. I went to the Commercial-street Police-station to report the case. No one in the house was informed by me of what I had discovered. I told the inspector at the police-station, and after a while I returned to Hanbury-street, but did not re-enter the house. As I passed I saw constables there.

Have you ever seen the deceased before?—No.

Were you the first down in the house that morning?—No; there was a lodger named Thompson, who was called at half-past three.

Have you ever seen women in the passage?—Mrs. Richardson has said there have been. I have not seen them myself. I have only been in the house a fortnight.

Did you hear any noise that Saturday morning?—No, sir.

Amelia Palmer, examined, stated: I live at 35, Dorset-street, Spitalfields, a common lodging-house. Off and on I have stayed there three years. I am married to Henry Palmer, a dock labourer. He was foreman, but met with an accident at the beginning of the year. I go out charing. My husband gets a pension, having been in the Army Reserve. I knew the deceased very well, for quite two years. I saw the body on Saturday at the mortuary, and am quite sure that it is that of Annie Chapman. She was a widow, and her husband, Frederick Chapman, was a veterinary surgeon in Windsor. He died about eighteen months ago. Deceased had lived apart from him for about four years or more. She lived in various places, principally in common lodging-houses in Spitalfields. I never knew her to have a settled home.

Has she lived at 30, Dorset-street?—Yes, about two years ago, with a man who made wire sieves, and at that time she was receiving 10s a week from her husband by post-office order, payable to her at the Commercial-road. This payment stopped about eighteen months ago, and she then found, on inquiry of some relative, that her husband was dead. I am under the impression that she ascertained this fact either from a brother or sister of her husband in Oxford-street, Whitechapel. She was nick-named, Mrs. Sivvy," because she lived with the sieve-maker. I know the man perfectly well, but don't know his name. I saw him last about eighteen months ago, in the City, and he told me that he was living at Notting-hill. I saw deceased two or three times last week. On Monday she was standing in the road opposite 35, Dorset-street. She had been staying there, and had no bonnet on. She had a bruise on one of her temples—I think the right. I said, "How did you get that?" She said, "Yes, look at my chest." Opening her dress, she showed me a bruise. She said, "Do you know the woman?" and gave some name which I do not remember. She made me understand that it was a woman who goes about selling books. Both this woman and the deceased were acquainted with a man called "Harry the Hawker." Chapman told me that she was with some other man, Ted Stanley, on Saturday, Sept. 1. Stanley is a very respectable man. Deceased said she was with him at a beer-shop, 87, Commercial-street, at the corner of Dorset-street, where "Harry the Hawker" was with the woman. This man put down a two shilling piece and the woman picked it up and put down a penny. There was some feeling in consequence and the same evening the book-selling woman met the deceased and injured her in the face and chest. When deceased told me this, she said she was living at 35, Dorset-street. On the Tuesday afternoon I saw Chapman again near to Spitalfields Church. She said she felt no better, and she should go into the casual ward for a day or two. I remarked that she looked very pale, and asked her if she had had anything to eat. She replied, "No, I have not had a cup of tea to-day." I gave her twopence to get some, and told her not to get any rum, of which she was fond. I have seen her the worse for drink.

What did she do for a living?—She used to do crochet work, make antimacassars, and sell flowers. She was out late at night at times. On Fridays she used to go to Stratford to sell anything she had. I did not see her from the Tuesday to the Friday afternoon, 7th inst., when I met her about five o'clock in Dorset-street. She appeared to be perfectly sober. I said, "Are you going to Stratford to-day?" She answered, "I feel too ill to do anything." I left her immediately afterwards, and returned about ten minutes later, and found her in the same spot. She said, "It is of no use my going away. I shall have to go somewhere to get some money to pay my lodgings." She said no more, and that was the last time that I saw her. Deceased stated that she had been in the casual ward, but did not say which one. She did not say she had been refused admission. Deceased was a very industrious woman when she was sober. I have seen her often the worse for drink. She could not take much without making her drunk. She had been living a very irregular life during the whole time that I have known her. Since the death of her husband she has seemed to give way altogether. I understood that she had a sister and mother living at Brompton, but I do not think they were on friendly terms. I have never known her to stay with her relatives even for a night. On the Monday she observed: "If my sister will send me the boots, I shall go hopping." She had two children—a boy and a girl. They were at Windsor until her husband's death, and since then they have been in a school. Deceased was a very respectable woman, and never used bad language. She has stayed out in the streets all night.

Do you know of any one that would be likely to have injured her?—No.

The Coroner (having read a communication handed to him by the police): It seems to be very doubtful whether the husband was a veterinary surgeon. He may have been a coachman.

Timothy Donovan, 35, Dorset-street, Spitalfields, said: I am the deputy of a common lodging house. I have seen the body of the deceased, and have identified it as that of a woman who stayed at my house for the last four months. She was not there last week until Friday afternoon, between two and three o'clock. I was coming out of the office after getting up, and she asked me if she could go down in the kitchen, and I said "Yes," and asked her where she had been all the week. She replied that she had been in the infirmary, but did not say which.

A police-officer stated that the deceased had been in the casual ward.

Witness resumed: Deceased went down in the kitchen, and I did not see her again until half-past one or a quarter to two on Saturday morning. At that time I was sitting in the office, which faces the front door. She went into the kitchen. I sent the watchman's wife, who was in the office with me, downstairs to ask her husband about the bed. Deceased came upstairs to the office and said, "I have not sufficient money for my bed. Don't let it. I shan't be long before I am in."

How much was it?—Eightpence for the night. The bed she occupied, No. 29, was the one that she usually occupied. Deceased was then eating potatoes, and went out. She stood in the door two or three minutes, and then repeated, "Never mind, Tim; I shall soon be back. Don't let the bed." It was then about ten minutes to two a.m. She left the house, going in the direction of Brushfield-street. John Evans, the watchman, saw her leave the house. I did not see her again.

Was she the worse for drink when you saw her last?—She had had enough; of that I am certain. She walked straight. Generally on Saturdays she was the worse for drink. She was very sociable in the kitchen. I said to her, "You can find money for your beer, and you can't find money for your bed." She said she had been only to the top of the street—where there is a public-house.

Did you see her with any man that night?—No, sir.

Where did you think she was going to get the money from?—I did not know. She used to come and stay at the lodging-house on Saturdays with a man—a pensioner—of soldierly appearance, whose name I do not know.

Have you seen her with other men?—At other times she has come with other men, and I have refused her.

You only allow the women at your place one husband?—The pensioner told me not to let her a bed if she came with any other man. She did not come with a man that night. I never saw her with any man that week.

In answer to the jury witness said the beds were double at 8d per night, and as a rule deceased occupied one of them by herself.

The Coroner: When was the pensioner last with deceased at the lodging-house?—On Sunday, Sept. 2. I cannot say whether they left together. I have heard the deceased say, "Tim, wait a minute. I am just going up the street to see if I can see him." She added that he was going to draw his pension. This occurred on Saturday, Aug. 25, at three a.m.

In reply to the Coroner, the police said nothing was known of the pensioner.

Examination continued: I never heard deceased call the man by any name. He was between forty and forty-five years of age, about 5ft 6in. or 5ft 8in in height. Sometimes he would come dressed as a dock labourer; at other times he had a gentlemanly appearance. His hair was rather dark. I believe she always used to find him at the top of the street. Deceased was on good terms with the lodgers. About Tuesday, Aug. 28, she and another woman had a row in the kitchen. I saw them both outside. As far as I know she was not injured at that time. I heard from the watchman that she had had a clout. I noticed a day or two afterwards, on the Thursday, that she had a slight touch of a black eye. She said, "Tim, this is lovely," but did not explain how she got it. The bruise was to be seen on Friday last. I know the other woman, but not her name. Her husband hawks laces and other things.

John Evans testified: I am night watchman at 35, Dorset-street, and have identified the deceased as having lived at the lodging-house. I last saw her there on Saturday morning, and she left at about a quarter to two o'clock. I was sent down in the kitchen to see her, and she said she had not sufficient money. When she went upstairs I followed her, and as she left the house. I watched her go through a court called Paternoster-street, into Brushfield-street, and then turn towards Spitalfields Church. Deceased was the worse for drink, but not badly so. She came in soon after twelve (midnight), when she said she had been over to her sister's in Vauxhall. She sent one of the lodgers for a pint of beer, and then went out again, returning shortly before a quarter to two. I knew she had been living a rough night life. She associated with a man, a pensioner, every Saturday, and this individual called on Saturday at 2.30 p.m. and inquired for the deceased. He had heard something about her death, and came to see if it was true. I do not know his name or address. When I told him what had occurred he went straight out, without saying a word, towards Spitalfields Church. I did not see deceased and this man leave the house last Sunday week.

Did you see the deceased and another woman have a row in the kitchen?—Yes, on Thursday, Aug. 30. Deceased and a woman known as "Eliza," at 11.30 a.m., quarrelled about a piece of soap, and Chapman received a blow in the chest. I noticed that she had a slight black eye. There are marks on the body in a similar position.

By the Jury: I have never heard any one threaten her, nor express any fear of any one. I have never heard any one of the women in the lodging house say that they had been threatened.

At this stage the inquiry was adjourned until to-morrow (Wednesday).

THE "SERVIAN SCANDAL."

QUEEN NATALIE'S DEFENCE.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

VIENNA, Sept. 10.

M. Pirotchanatz, Queen Natalie's counsel, has thought proper to publish the document presented to the Servian Consistory in her Majesty's name.

It begins by saying that the King of Servia has set aside his lawful and devoted wife, who gave him an heir for the Servian throne. He has taken away the son from the mother, whom he has sent out of her own country like a criminal. The Queen delares that her life, both public and private, has been an open book for everybody. She has not a single fault to reproach herself with. In no country is there a Law or Tribunal for Sovereigns. They are answerable only to their conscience and to everlasting Justice; but as the King has appealed to the judicial institutions that mete out Justice in his name, and take the oath before him, the Queen is willing to accept the same judges. Then follows an eloquent account of the situation in which the Queen finds herself in consequence of the wrong that has been done her. She speaks of her love for her son, her dutiful behaviour to her husband, and her devotion to the country. She describes her fate as one worthy of pity, that must call forth tears even from the stones themselves; but she asks for no sympathy—all she wants is Justice. The charges brought against her by the King are not substantiated by evidence, and if they were they would not furnish ground for a divorce. Queen Natalie affirms that she can produce witnesses of unexceptionable standing, commanding general esteem, who can testify that she never desired anything but what was good for her husband and her country. All her actions were guided by that spirit. She still hopes a reconciliation may be effected, but if not then she must defend her honour, as Mother, Wife, and Queen, by every means at her disposal.

The document expatiates at some length on the Servian divorce-law, and advances two suggestions—either that the Consistory should order proceedings to be taken in view of an attempt at reconciliation, or that the Queen should be summoned personally before the Consistory for the same purpose, or, should the attempt fail, with the object of sifting all the circumstances connected with the case.

Moreover, the Queen states that she is entitled to demand that the Consistory shall summon her to appear before them in person, as the Law prescribes it; but the right to defend herself personally before the Consistory does not depend upon any decision of its members, and the Queen says nothing will induce her to renounce that right. If she is prevented by force from making use of it, there can be no question of judging her, and whatever the Consistory may in that case decide must be null and void, and cannot have judicial force. Queen Natalie signs herself as the "faithful and humble daughter of the Orthodox Church."

The document is dated "Versailles, Aug. 20, 1888."

GERMAN COURT AND POLITICS.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

BERLIN, Sept. 10.

In presence of Kaiser Wilhelm, who was accompanied by Prince Albrecht of Prussia, Regent of Brunswick, and the Crown-Prince of Greece, and surrounded by the usual brilliant suite, the parade of the Third Army-Corps took place this morning on the Tempelhofer-Feld. The weather was windy, but to the relief of the immense throng of spectators the recent rain had laid the dust. This Army-Corps had not been submitted to the keen and critical glance of its sovereign-general since 1880, when the grandfather of the present Kaiser was still able to hold his reviews from his saddle. The men composing this excellent corps, amounting to some 33,000 bayonets and sabres, besides artillery, come from the Mark of Brandenburg, and are chiefly noteworthy for their short stature as compared with their picked comrades of the Guards. The infantry can, however, indisputably hold their own even pitted against these latter first-rate troops, and the Kaiser is said to have been extremely pleased with the general appearance and marching of the corps to-day. His Majesty was most lustily cheered by the crowd as he rode into town after the review with the troops. A considerable number of carriages was admitted on the ground to witness the parade, but the police-authorities found themselves unable to give tickets to certain personages who might reasonably have expected to receive this privilege.

Amongst the general public were several British officers travelling through Berlin, who were struck not only by the quality of the troops but by the numbers. To-day some 33,000 men mustered on the ground, whilst for last year's Jubilee-parade before the Queen at Aldershot only 11,000 were brought together, and one of our grand field-days hardly ever witnesses more than 4,000 men of all arms.

The latest number of the paper containing the General-orders to the army contains an Imperial Cabinet-decree concerning the publication of the new infantry drill regulations, wherein the Kaiser says:

"In grateful remembrance of his Majesty, my father, resting in the Lord, I hereby give to the Army the new infantry drill regulations which owe their origin to him. Whilst fully maintaining the long-established discipline and order, its object is to give wider room for perfecting the troops for the requirements of action."

His Majesty forbids officers on pain of his Imperial displeasure, which will be followed by cashiering, to make any verbal or written additions to the regulations. The Kaiser will receive on Oct. 15, 1889, reports on the working of the new regulations which will be distributed in the course of the present month.

Miss Ellen Terry, after a short visit to Vienna, has returned to Berlin, and was present this evening at a performance of "Romeo and Juliet" at the "Deutsches Theater."

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

All the sections had before them long and varied lists of papers yesterday, and some were forced to split themselves up into sub-sections in order to get through their work. The section which proved most generally attractive was the Geographical one, where nearly every part of the great African Continent was under discussion. Papers were read on the condition of Central Africa, Bechuanaland, the Transvaal, the Cameroons, Tunis, and South Morocco. In the course of the discussion Sir Charles Wilson, Sir Francis de Winton, and the Rev. John Mackenzie agreed from their African experiences in thinking that there is not yet any cause for alarm respecting Stanley. In the Economic Sections the variation in the monetary standards, the use of index numbers, and the amount of gold and silver in use as money and in the arts were discussed. In the Technical Science Section various new applications of electricity to lighting and to other purposes were described. In the Anthropological Section, prehistoric commerce, the early races of Western Asia, and discoveries in Asia Minor occupied attention. In the other sections the subjects were very abstruse. At a meeting of the General Committee Professor Flower, director of the Natural History Museum, was elected president of the association for the meeting at Newcastle next year, and it was resolved to accept an invitation from Leeds to meet there in 1890.

Princess Mary, Duchess of Teck, visited the Lyceum Theatre last evening and for the second time witnessed the performance of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

It is stated that the scarcity of pickers in and around Marden, in the Weald of Kent, is causing much loss and inconvenience to hopgrowers in that district, where the hops are good, and many thousands of the London poor could now find employment, but have been deterred from going in consequence of the reports of a short crop.

REPRESENTATION OF WOLVERHAMPTON.—Mr. Gladstone having received a report of the meeting of the "Liberal Three Hundred" of the Liberal Association of South Wolverhampton, containing resolutions protesting against the Government's Irish policy and the discussion as to Mr. Villiers, the member for the constituency, writes—"I thank you for the report of the meeting and resolution expressing the political sentiments of the district upon the Irish question. No one can support them with such effect as its present representative, and I sincerely trust he may consider that the time has now come when the prolonged controversy between England and Ireland may with advantage be brought to a close."

FATALITY WITH A PEA-GUN.—A son of the Rev. W. E. Greene, of London, who is doing temporary duty at Edington, near Bridgwater, playfully discharged a pea-gun (which he was accustomed to practice with in the garden) at a nurse girl, named Jane Poulter. The pellet struck her in the forehead and penetrated the brain. Death resulted in a few minutes. The boy is aged eleven years, and the deceased was sixteen years old.

THE MURDER OF A SERVANT.—At Barnsley, yesterday, Henry Hey, landlord of the Blacksmiths Arms, Thurlstone, was committed for trial charged with the murder of Margaret Hill, his servant, on the 3rd inst. Dr. Wilson, who had attended the prisoner, said in his opinion Hey was suffering from delirium tremens at the time he shot the deceased.

"Seeing is believing, tasting is the truth." For amazing strength, rich and delicious flavour, maintenance of health, [illegible] Horniman's Tea is unequalled. List of agents in all towns.—[ADVT.]

FESTIVAL OF THE THREE CHOIRS.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

HEREFORD, MONDAY.

The 165th meeting of the Three Choirs of Hereford, Gloucester, and Worcester begins here to-morrow, and will continue until Friday evening. It must be generally known that the Festival of the Three Choirs is held in rotation at the cities above-named, and that originally it began and ended with a special Cathedral service, at which the united choirs sang and a collection was "taken up" for the benefit of the widows and orphans of clergymen once labouring within the three dioceses. Equally familiar is the fact that the institution has outlived the propriety of the title by which it continues to be known, the Three Choirs having now very little importance in connection with a festival which numbers its executants by the hundred, and draws them from many parts of the Kingdom. No one, however, would think of interfering with a time-honoured name, especially as the existing procedure recognises to some extent that which prevailed a century and a half ago. The festival, moreover, still subserves the object which its founders had in view, and is the main support of a large and efficient charity, but its musical development has undoubtedly thrown its beneficent purpose into the back-ground. These meetings are artistic events before all. As such men talk about them and attend them, and as such they do a vast amount of good in an extensive section of the country not ordinarily blessed with opportunities of hearing great works well performed. The Three Choir festivals come also as a pleasant break in the monotony of the unexciting life led by the typical cathedral town; they exalt music as an art that may now and then turn a population aside from its beaten track, and in various ways, direct or indirect, they tend to the refinement of the public mind and taste. Apropos there is just now a movement in Hereford against brass bands, as represented by the performers connected with certain rival religious "armies," who love to display themselves in the thoroughfares. The Town Council was prayed last week by a number of burgesses to relieve them from "the long-continued and increasing noise caused by various assemblies and processions, accompanied by brass bands and powerful drums." Let nobody imagine that the townsfolk desire a crusade against music. I heard the bands yesterday, and am able to say that with music they have no concern whatever. Here lies the objection to them—an objection expressed with startling force by a member of the Decoration Committee what time that body was discussing the propriety of engaging a good band to play during Festival week in the open space at High Town. A gentleman having mildly remarked that they had had enough of brass bands, the member in question jumped up and exclaimed, "We have had enough of that d——d noise, and we shall now be glad to have some music." Although the refining influence of the divine art has not yet extended to the worthy councillor's language, it is clear that he knows music when he hears it. I take him as a representative man (bar the expletive) and one of a class to whose existence and strength the recurring Festivals have largely contributed. With the reservation aforesaid, he is no doubt, a product of the Festivals.

I regret to find that Hereford is not now, and with regard to the present solemnity, showing its old spirit. It has often been my duty to praise the little city for a plucky initiative, and for the gallant way in which it has set an example time and again to Gloucester and Worcester. This makes me look with all the more concern upon signs of backsliding. Three years ago the Friendly Societies of Hereford marched in procession to the cathedral on the Festival Sunday, and no doubt helped to swell the funds of the charity. Yesterday this pleasant and popular function was abandoned, the Societies, I am told, having waited for the Mayor's initiative, while his Worship waited for the Societies, like Sir Richard Strachan in the famous rhyme. But this is not all. On former occasions the city has been prettily and extensively decorated on a uniform plan, whereas now, with the exception of a few arches, Hereford depends for a festive appearance upon the individual efforts of householders. Happily there is a set-off—the tickets of admission are selling merrily; I have it on the best authority that the booking is far ahead of what it was in 1885, and that, by the way, nearly every place has been taken for Sir Arthur Sullivan's "Golden Legend." This implies public satisfaction with the programme, which, in point of fact, is well adapted to gratify the taste of the local community. Choice has fallen upon works that are either well-known or strongly recommended by powerful names and high repute. "Elijah" stands, of course, at the head of the list—the place it has occupied for forty years, and from which there is no fear of ejectment. The second cathedral selection includes a large part of Handel's "Samson," and the whole of Sterndale Bennett's Birmingham cantata, "The Woman of Samaria." I am delighted to find that this beautiful work has a place, and an opportunity of once again appealing on behalf of all that is pure and of good report in religious art. For Wednesday evening we are promised the first two parts of the "Creation," Spohr's "God, Thou art great"—a favourite in these counties—and Schubert's "Song of Miriam." Thursday morning's selections are Cherubini's great Mass in D minor; F. H. Cowen's "Song of Thanksgiving," written for the opening of the Melbourne Exhibition; Dr. Hubert Parry's successful setting of Milton's "Blest pair of sirens;" and Sir F. A. G. Ouseley's "St. Polycarp." Friday morning is, as usual, taken up by Handel's "Messiah." The secular concerts in the Shire Hall are three. To-morrow will be given "The Golden Legend," under the composer's direction; the second concert, on Thursday evening, is devoted to a miscellaneous selection; while the third, on Friday evening, offers a treat to lovers of instrumental and vocal chamber music. Obviously this is a good programme for the public to whom it appeals, and has the merit, moreover, of containing nothing unworthy of the occasion. The executive resources of the Festival are adequate. Mr. Carrodus "leads" a fine orchestra, composed of our best English performers, sixty-five in number; the chorus, as was shown at to-day's rehearsals, is most excellent in tone and balance, while, as to the solo vocalists, it will suffice merely to mention the names of Madame Albani, Miss Anna Williams, Miss Ambler, Madame Enriquez, Miss Hilda Wilson, Messrs. Lloyd, Banks, Brereton, and Santley. Mr. Done (Worcester) presides at the organ, assisted by Mr. C. Lee Williams (Gloucester), who is also the pianoforte accompanist, and the conductor's baton is held by Dr. Langdon Colborne, organist of the cathedral in which the Festival takes place. Thus, "furnished unto all good works," the performances should be satisfactory.

The week's proceedings began yesterday with an evening service, made special through the co-operation of a large body of voices in addition to the ordinary choir, and the performance of a sacred cantata, "Samuel," composed for the occasion by Dr Colborne. In this, as in other parts of the service, a small string band, led by Mr. Zerbini, took part. Admission being free, a vast congregation assembled, and, owing to utter want of regulation on the part of the authorities, the crush at the doors led to scenes that were, to say the least, unseemly. Dr. Colborne's work appertains to the class of "church cantatas" so many examples of which were left to us by Sebastian Bach—that is to say, it consists of religious narrative and reflection interspersed with hymns sung to well-known tunes, in which the congregation are expected to join. There are signs that this form of sacred music is coming into vogue, and undoubtedly a large field of usefulness lies open to a class of church composition which, while admitting the loftiest flights of art, is yet intimately connected with public worship and the rightful share of the congregation therein. "Samuel" avowedly presents a modest example, the composer having intended it for use in parish churches, and therefore kept his music within the reach of parish choirs. This, of course, bound him down to considerable simplicity of expression, but by no means debarred him from the utterance of noble and beautiful ideas. I am not able to congratulate the Rev. J. R. G. Taylor, M.A., upon his compilation of the text from Scripture and hymn book. He might easily have found more poetical and not less appropriate lyrics than the majority of those chosen, while, for some reason or other, he has broken off the story of Samuel's call to warn Eli of approaching catastrophe just after the child's recognition of the Divine Voice. It may be that the compiler desired to invest with general significance an event which was essentially special, but this is taking somewhat of a liberty, and no recognition of it makes up for fragmentary treatment of a well-known narrative. In composing the music Dr. Colborne seems to have been unfavourably affected by consciousness of having to write down to the parish choir. His music is simple enough, but it is also commonplace, which need not have been, as a thousand examples go to prove. I fail to see in this Cantata, a few passages apart, anything but a succession of trite ideas, that have been many times expressed, and better expressed, before. The composer, in point of fact, seems to have closed and barred the chambers of his fancy lest anything striking by its beauty or its freshness should issue therefrom and frighten the parish choir. In this he made a grave mistake, for his work, as it stands, belongs to the superfluous utterances which now abound in the musical world and call for the unrelenting lash of a Carlyle. The performance of the Cantata, to which Miss Hilda Wilson ably contributed, was, perhaps, as good as one had a right to expect.

NOTES FROM BERLIN.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

Dr. Gerhard Rohlfs, advocating the immediate equipment of a German expedition for the relief of Emin Pasha, writes to the Cologne Gazette, and appeals to the State, or to the liberality of those rich Germans who have the future of German colonisation at heart, to come forward and supply funds in the same liberal style that England adopts on such occasions. Subjoined is an analysis of the views of this well-known authority. In discussing the question, what form the expedition shall assume, he passes in review that undertaken in search of Vogel, which failed; and that undertaken by Stanley in search of Livingstone, which was a brilliant success.

The conclusions he draws from the circumstances of these expeditions are two very obvious ones: first, that one cannot be sufficiently careful in the selection of men for the enterprise, and, secondly, that the men selected must be provided with adequate means. As to the latter, the means; if the object of the expedition be merely to find a lost traveller, or to obtain reliable information as to his fate, then it is quite possible to fix a definite amount as sufficient, for it is plain that, had the searchers for Vogel been better chosen for their task, they could have obtained complete authentic information about him. When, however, the object is, as in the case of Emin Pasha, to bring aid, then small and limited sums of money are useless, since the explorer must, when he arrives, prove an efficient help and not another useless mouth to feed.

As to the kind of aid that Emin Pasha needs, there can be no doubt that it must take the form of rifles, perhaps also small cannon, ammunition, and clothing; for he has no other wants. An expedition that is to do this must be equipped with men and money in such a way that failure is out of the question, and it must push on its way systematically. The plan of the march must be definite, though slow; and the expeditionary party must contain sufficient Germans to be able to hold their own without having to rely on others. Depots must be erected every 100 miles (i.e., six to eight days' march apart), and if possible these must be occupied by Germans. The distance to Muta-Nsige is about 1,000 miles; but whether the route chosen be that of Tanganyika, of Muta-Nsige, or of Ukerewe, it is all alike German territory. The importance of this at the present state of German colonisation is extremely great; for by the foundation of some such chain of stations the prestige of Germany would be enormously increased.

From Muta-Nsige, assuming that one would strike it somewhere about the middle of its east shore, the distance to traverse to reach Emin Pasha at Wadelay would be about 250 miles. A hundred Germans would be sufficient for this part of the journey, and it would be quite easy to collect such a number, judging by past experience. In 1878, for instance, a Bavarian officer offered to get the writer 4,000 soldiers, who had served their time, and the number of volunteers who came to him personally was very considerable.

The only condition of success is that the expedition should be made immediately, and it is plain that, if the money is to be obtained by voluntary contributions, this is impossible; and so, unless some millionaire comes forward, the State must step in and follow the example of England, who spent seven millions on the Abyssinian expedition, from which she could not expect to derive any material advantage.

It seldom happens that a man is complimented by being told that he resembles another. He is almost sure to consider the comparison anything but flattering. What, I wonder, will Mr. Gladstone and his Excellency Dr. Windhorst say when they hear that a point of resemblance exists between them? We read in the National Zeitung, à propos of Mr. Gladstone's Celtic sympathies, that he is undergoing a process of development which is gradually turning him into an "English Windhorst." The chrysalis stage has been of long duration, but it has been actively utilised for various unsuccessful revolutionary objects; and now, in order to inflict another wound on the heart of the country he has done his best to ruin, he tries to turn a national festival into a wrestling ground for political agitation. He, an Englishman, is thus bent on seducing his Welsh compatriots by delivering a long-winded, inflammatory, anti-national speech at Wrexham, at the great Celtic musical festival. The comparison between the two statesmen is drawn as follows: Windhorst, in order to further his Guelphic aims, and to sate his Guelphic spirit of revenge, takes up the cudgels for the Poles against the Empire; whilst Gladstone, in order to gain followers, tries to foment revolutionary ideas in Wales, utterly regardless whether he endangers the unity of the British realm or not. After all, the comparison may not be uninstructive. And it is interesting from another side, when taken in connection with the policy of the Prussian Government in Posen. Last year an Act of Parliament was passed enabling the Government to purchase estates from broken-down proprietors and parcel them out in small holdings. This has been going on now for some months, and Protestants from Swabia are being induced to settle in what may be called Polish Posen. These same settlers, who otherwise would have gone to America, are exclusively Protestants. Windhorst and his party protest strongly from their point of view against these proceedings, as they desire the former Roman Catholic holders to be replaced by people of the same persuasion. This does not, however, suit the Government plans; for it is found that new-coming Roman Catholics fraternise naturally with the Polish Catholics, so that the new state of things becomes as anti-German as it was before. The Swabians from Wurtemberg are, on the contrary, least likely to make common cause with them; and, belonging to the farming class, make good settlers. These will, therefore, in time hold much the same position relative to the Poles as the Protestants in the North of Ireland to the Roman Catholics in the rest of that country. Those latter were admittedly sent there to support the cause of England; and now the Prussian Government is adopting a similar policy for the purpose of thoroughly Germanising and de-Polising the eastern provinces of the kingdom; or, in other words, for ridding the Empire of a disturbing element, which is to be replaced by a more productive and thrifty type of labourer.

AN EGYPTIAN SWORD-CUT.—An Incident of the Late War.—There has been a considerable outcry about the supply of defective weapons to the British Army and Navy—cannon that burst and killed the artillerymen, rifles that would not fire because of unsuitable cartridges, and, above all, swords and sword bayonets that broke or bent when put to the test of battle—these have justly formed the theme of much popular indignation.

But though it is undoubtedly proper that while, unfortunately, swords have to be used at all, they should be good ones, we cannot help regretting that so much attention should be bestowed upon the sword and so little on the wounds it causes and the means of healing them.

This reflection is more immediately suggested to our mind by the following anecdote, for which we are indebted to a friend only recently returned from the Soudan.

In one of the conflicts with the Soudanese, immediately preceding the disastrous defeat and death of Hicks Pasha, and the utter annihilation of his army, an Egyptian soldier received an ugly sword-cut from one of the dusky warriors of the desert. With other wounded men he was borne to the rear, and the injury he had received was pronounced so serious by the surgeon that the poor fellow's life was despaired of. But one of those angels who always hover near the Demon of War was present, in the shape of a Sister of Mercy, who declined to take the same gloomy view of the soldier's condition. The Egyptian doctor having given him up, she at once proceeded to treat him in her own way. The cut had developed into a terrible wound, and the treatment applied to it by the sister consisted in well moistening a thin piece of linen cloth with Dredge's Heal-All, and applying it close round the wound. Then over the whole she placed another cloth. She allowed the under cloth to remain untouched, and moistened it thoroughly with Dredge's Heal-All once a day, till the completion of the cure, which took place in less than a week. How much suffering would be spared to thousands of wounded soldiers, how many valuable lives would be preserved, if the military authorities acted on the now world-wide recognition of the fact that, for fresh wounds and cuts, Dredge's Heal-All is the finest remedy yet known to mankind.

But this medicament is also the most efficacious liniment that can be resorted to for Rheumatism, the Gout, Pains in the Limbs and Numbness, Sciatica, and Paralytic Affections, Toothache and Faceache, Sprains and Bruises, Burns and Scalds, Spasms and Cramp, Stiffness of the Joints of the Neck, Chilblains before they are broken, Sore Throat, and even Quinsey—that fruitful source of mortality.

AFTER TEN YEARS' SUFFERING.
To Messrs. Barclay and Sons.
Teignmouth, March 16, 1887.
Dear Sirs,—I wish to acknowledge the great benefit received from the application of two bottles of Dredge's Heal-All to a wound of eight or ten years' standing, with much discharge, in my leg, for which I had not been able to obtain relief from other remedies applied, until advised to try the "Heal-All." The wound has now a healthy appearance, and I am happy to add that I have every expectation of an entire cure, by a further short continuance of the application. (Signed) LOTTIE BROWN.

A SPRAIN CURED IN TWO DAYS.
A gentleman from Kustendje, on a visit to London a few weeks since, writes as follows to Barclay and Sons:
"Gentlemen,—Having suffered much from a bad sprain, and tried without result many other remedies, I, on the advice of a friend, bought two days ago a bottle of Dredge's Heal-All, which has afforded me absolute relief. Please let me have a dozen bottles immediately, so that I may take them to my friends in Turkey."

RELIEVED FROM THREE YEARS' PAIN.
26, Upper George-street, Edgware-road, London, W.,
July 6, 1888.
Mrs. Verner presents her compliments, and begs to state that, suffering from weakness in the muscles of her legs and legs, and being in great pain a few days ago, she sent for a bottle of Dredge's Heal-All, which relieved the pain. Mrs. V. has had four bottles, and uses one a day. She wishes to know whether she can have a dozen bottles of the Heal-All. An early answer would oblige, as Mrs. V. leaves London in a few days.

DREDGE'S HEAL-ALL is Sold in Bottles, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d., by all Chemists and Medicine Vendors in the United Kingdom, and by the Proprietors, BARCLAY and SONS (Limited), 95, Farringdon-street, London, E.C.

LONDON, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has arrived in Vienna.

Our Vienna correspondent telegraphed last night the defence of Queen Natalie of Servia to the proceedings taken before the Consistory by her husband, King Milan.

A telegram from Teheran states that Ishak Khan is marching on Cabul.

Two destructive earthquake-shocks were experienced in Greece on Sunday evening.

Several of the Parliamentary revision courts in the metropolitan area were opened yesterday.

Yesterday the British Association at Bath was principally occupied with geographical questions. Professor Flower was elected president of next year's meeting at Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Two men were arrested yesterday in connection with the murder of Annie Chapman, in Hanbury-street, Whitechapel, at an early hour on Saturday morning. John Piser, alleged to be the "Leather Apron" so often referred to, was taken at the house of his step-mother in Mulberry-street, and was conveyed to the Leman-street Police-station, where a hostile demonstration was made by the mob as he entered. Among his effects were found five knives such as might be used in his calling of slipper-maker, and also a much more formidable instrument with a curved blade five inches long. The second arrest was effected in a tavern at Gravesend. The man gave the name of Pigott, and as upon his clothing were found many blood-stains he was detained and conveyed under escort to Commercial-street Police-station. Here he was examined by several witnesses, who, however, failed to identify him as the man wanted. The divisional surgeon pronounced him to be a lunatic, and he will be removed to an asylum and kept under observation.

An inquest on the remains of Annie Chapman was opened by Mr. Wynne Baxter, coroner, at the Working Lads' Institute. Evidence was given by John Davis, who discovered the body, by Amelia Palmer, who had known the deceased for five years, and had for a time lodged in the same house, and by Timothy Donovan, the deputy, and John Evans, the night watchman of a common lodging house in which the deceased often stayed. The inquiry was adjourned till to-morrow.

Last night, as the result of a meeting of the tradesmen of Whitechapel which was held earlier in the day, a notice was issued offering a substantial reward for the capture of the murderer or information leading thereto. A subscription list has been opened, and the movement is being warmly taken up.

Before the Highgate justices yesterday a manufacturer's carman named Cooper was charged with assaulting the collector at the Gate House Hotel for refusing to let him pass without paying toll. The summons had been taken out by the landlord of the hotel, who claimed that under his lease from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners he had a right to levy a toll of twopence on vehicles used for trading purposes, and not belonging to Highgate. He explained, however, that he had authorised the collector, who was a paralysed man, to apply the proceeds, varying from sixpence to a shilling a day, to his own use. The magistrates fined the defendant half-a-crown and costs.

Fresh activity was shown yesterday on the Stock Exchange, and the markets were firm, with some exceptions. Home and Canadian railways were especially buoyant, while American and Mexican gave way. Some of the Foreign Government bonds improved, and others relapsed. Copper and diamond shares exhibited a better tendency. At the Bank £50,000 in gold was received.

THERE are many signs in Ireland of a revolt of the left wing of the Nationalists against the right wing and its English allies. The most serious indication is the speech made by Mr. MICHAEL DAVITT in the Queen's County, on Sunday. It was a fierce and bitter denunciation of the landlords with reference to the recent evictions. "If such acts were perpetrated in Russia or Turkey," said Mr. DAVITT, "the landlords would be sent to gaol or the gallows; but because the brutality and infamy occur at the doors of Englishmen they have no compassion for the tenants." He went on to declare that he could not acquit prominent men of the Liberal party of the charge of adopting a laissez-faire attitude towards the exterminating policy of Lord SALISBURY, and of a left-handed acquiescence in eviction as a means of thinning the population of Ireland. He objected to the hymns chanted in praise of Mr. GLADSTONE at Nationalist meetings. "So long as the Liberal party remained indifferent to the atrocities being perpetrated in Ireland they had no faith in the toasted alliance of English Liberals with the Nationalist party. In 1886 a hundred Liberals promised to visit Ireland and defy coercion, but they had not done so, and he was glad of it, for they would have preached patience to the people, and a forbearance from retaliation that would be cowardly under other circumstances. The alliance, which was expected to be a shield, had proved a handcuff, leaving the people defenceless. Unless the Liberal party did something to ensure confidence some of them would feel compelled to fall back on means and methods not constitutional towards the licensed instruments of tyranny. If people did not defend to the death their hearthstones they would never prove themselves worthy of getting their country to rule. A race that would allow the BALFOURS or CLANRICARDES to tumble their homes about their ears were unworthy of any sympathy." When we recall that Mr. DAVITT was the founder of the Land League, and that Parnellism has attained all its success through resistance to rent, this protest from the original leader of the agrarian movement is remarkably significant. Mr. DAVITT is not in Parliament, and shows no desire to enter it. Perhaps he objects to taking the oath of allegiance—some Irish patriots have consciences—or he may fear that his stern and simple honesty would be weakened in the atmosphere of Westminster. He might not be able to adopt the very effusive tone of unconvicted Irish patriots towards a Minister under whose authority he was for many years herded with common felons at Dartmoor for what Mr. GLADSTONE now considers a political offence.

This tone of discontent from a man who represents directly and thoroughly the aspirations and hopes of the Irish peasant is remarkable enough if we consider the circumstances. The concessions made by English legislation to the Irish tenant have been great and generous. No occupier in Ireland need sit for an hour under an "extortionate" rent; the courts are open to him at slight expense, and the recent judicial reductions have been very extensive. Then, if a tenant falls into arrear and if a landlord seeks to evict him, the county court judge has power to refuse eviction and to spread the repayment of the debt over any number of years—his discretion being unlimited. Beyond this it is clear, from the undisputed facts, that, in all the recent cases, the landlord has gone far beyond judicial indulgence, and has offered substantial abatements, with, in many instances, the wiping-out of considerable arrears. In the presence of such a state of things the Irish farmer still grumbles and still resents. His appetite grows. He has been told again and again by agitators that the land belongs to "the people," and the people in his dialect simply implies himself. In fact, all the advantages conferred on "Ireland" by recent legislation have been monopolised by about three hundred thousand persons who happened to be tenant-farmers in 1881. The rest of the population of Ireland were left out in the cold. Little or nothing have the labourers gained, for the farmers have obstructed or jobbed the Acts intended to secure them allotments. The artisans of the towns have secured no advantages, nor have the commercial or professional classes. A minority of Irishmen called landlords find their incomes reduced, and a minority of Irishmen called tenants have had their incomes increased; but the beneficence of the new statutes ends with this transfer of money from the pockets of one class to those of another. We must also point out that the boon is strictly limited to the existing generation, or rather to the men who were actually in possession in 1881. Farms are not cheaper than they were in 1880; the rent is lower, but the purchase-money of the tenant-right is very high—so that anybody who has begun farming during the last seven years finds himself quite as heavily burdened as the rack-rented occupiers of ten years ago. We are well aware that the laws passed with the intention of settling the agrarian question in Ireland were inspired by the most generous ideas all round. Mr. GLADSTONE and his colleagues expressed their belief that they would confer benefits on the cultivators and inflict no injury on the owners of the soil. Then, as a reward, we should see the rural population of Ireland happy, loyal, and contented. These expectations have not been realised. The landlords have suffered severely, not only in the cutting-off at least a third of their incomes, but in the serious insecurity of the remainder. As to the tenants of 1881, they have gained in a money point of view; but they are not happy, they are not loyal, and they are not contented. They still rely upon agitation for further concessions, and the farmer who should be devoting himself to peaceful industry in order to pay his reduced rent and support his family looks forward to a further reduction to be secured through boycotting, moonlighting, and another large Land Act when Mr. GLADSTONE again attains power. It may naturally excite some surprise that great statutes, conceived in lofty and generous hopes, and since extended through the joint action of both English parties, should have so signally failed both as regards their moral and practical results. A period of popular content followed the Reform Act of 1832. The repeal of the Corn Laws was hailed as an omen of peace between all classes; the great franchise measures of 1867 and of 1885 did much to ensure national harmony; but the Land Act of 1881 has sown dragons' teeth. The simple reason is that while purely political boons tend to satisfy the people, concessions to Socialism can never content them. When we gave the tenant one slice off the landlord's rent he acquired a longing for more, and if Mr. GLADSTONE, or the Irish Parliament which he would create, reduces the reduced rents by seventy per cent., there will still arise Mr. DAVITT or another to say "Why pay any rent at all?" This is the mischief of all benevolent interference with contract. If we could convince the Irish people that we have come to the bottom of our box of bon-bons there might be some hope that they would settle down and try to thrive by toil, and not by outrages; but with English party leaders ever ready to buy the Irish vote by promises and performances—by sacrificing political economy, consistency, property rights, and even human life in order to keep or attain office—we see no immediate prospect of an end of the question. Whatever Mr. GLADSTONE concedes, Mr. DAVITT is sure to ask for more.

Evictions are for Mr. DAVITT "outrages," and he is indignant because the Liberal leaders do not denounce them as if they were Bulgarian atrocities. Now, Mr. DAVITT is a remarkably sincere and disinterested man, and he has given repeated proofs of his devotion to the cause of the peasant. What is his final principle in this matter? Does he believe that any eviction of any tenant by any landlord is of the nature of crime? Does he think that an occupier has a right to his holding and his home, whether he pays rent or not? If so, he should not confine himself to Ireland. In London and other large cities many poor men and women—some of them Irish-born—are evicted weekly because they are unable, not unwilling, to pay rent. They have to go to the workhouse or starve. Why should he not ask the Liberal leaders to denounce these "outrages" as well? No doubt, a great deal of sympathy is naturally felt for poor cottagers turned out by a rich landlord. The scene lends itself to picturesque reporting. It is in the country, which is always more interesting than the back slums of a town. Members of Parliament, some of them English, frequently attend. There is the local priest to bless resistance, and a crowd to cheer the hero or heroine of the fight. Scaling ladders, battering rams, shields, and long pikes, are freely used. The police rush into "the imminent deadly breach," sometimes to be hurled back by Irish maids throwing scalding stirabout and wielding red-hot pokers. All this when trumpeted abroad by Mr. GLADSTONE, and re-echoed by a party press, impresses the imagination like the incidents of a civil war. Stripped of political accidents, it is a struggle to resist the payment of a lawful debt. If such a fight for such a cause took place in one of the Irish alleys of an English city it would be chronicled in the police news of the next day, and be speedily forgotten. No party leader would make capital out of it; no agitator would call the defaulting tenant a hero or a patriot. Doubtless it is a great pity that any man should be rendered homeless; such failures in life are always sad; but if we repealed every law that occasionally leads to scenes of woe and wretchedness we must abolish all statutes for the recovery of debt. In the nature of things defaulting debtors are generally poor men, and their creditors are better off. If, however, we on this ground refused to enforce the recovery of money we should strike at the foundation of society, which is and must be the validity of contracts. The reduction of rent imposed on the landlord is a contract voluntarily accepted by the tenant; while he remains he is bound to pay. If English legislation treats him again and again with indulgence, allowing him to break pledge after pledge and agreement after agreement, it may be inspired by benevolence and pity, but it will end in the demoralisation of the whole people and in the unsettlement of the foundations of society in the island. Therefore we fear that, ready as Mr. GLADSTONE may be to conciliate Mr. DAVITT, he cannot finally satisfy him or the peasantry he represents. Socialism is insatiate.

THAT "ignorance of the law excuseth no man" is obviously a maxim of high convenience to the State. Without the support of some such formula it might seem unreasonable to expect from the citizen, as we do at present, an acquaintance with certain effects of Parliamentary enactments at which no one is more surprised and disconcerted than the Legislature itself which passed them. With the assistance of this maxim, however, nothing can be easier or more equitable than for a court of justice to tell an unfortunate delinquent or unsuccessful applicant for relief that, though Parliament might have been quite ignorant of what it was doing in making this or the other inconsiderate change in the law, individual subjects of her Majesty will fail at their peril to show themselves wiser than the collective wisdom of the nation. In spite, notwithstanding, of the not inconsiderable risk which we, one and all of us, run from the inopportune application of this principle to our actions, there are few who are at much pains to keep themselves properly posted up in the law which they are presumed to know. Such a case as that of Mr. GEORGE HAMMOND, who, from his devotion to this branch of the citizen's duty, has won himself the honourable title of the "Billingsgate Q.C.," is comparatively rare. It is Mr. HAMMOND's practice, when summoned to appear at a police-court for any of those minor offences into which the best-conducted fish-porter may occasionally lapse, to bring with him a bundle of Acts of Parliament to substantiate his arguments. On the last occasion the charge against him was that of causing an obstruction with a donkey and barrow on Fish-street-hill. Upon the summons being read over to him, he at once raised technical objection to it. "I can prove," said the "Billingsgate Q.C.," "that this is the illegalest summons as ever I appeared to in this court." Constable Langdon then deposed that defendant's donkey and barrow were placed in such a position as to obstruct the traffic, and that they so remained for seventeen minutes; upon which the defendant revealed his acquaintance with another branch of the law by addressing to the constable the solemn warning "Young man, you will have a bit of paper off me for perjury." A boy had been left by him in charge of the barrow, and, upon that fact being admitted in evidence, Mr. Hammond exclaimed triumphantly, "There you are then; the boy was minding the barrow. Why didn't you summons him, and not me? Ain't that illegal?" The presiding Alderman seemed at first disposed to sustain the objection, but on further inquiry it appeared that the defendant specially requested that the summons might be issued against himself. His temporary absence was due to a visit to the butcher's for the purpose of buying a bit of meat. He was proceeding to develop his contention as to the illegality of the summons when Alderman Cowan cut him short with the remark that he could see defendant "knew all about it by the way in which he was cross-examining the constable," and dismissed the summons upon a promise from him that he would not repeat the offence.

The jurist of the future must be content, therefore, to rest in ignorance of the particular legal point which Mr. Hammond's forensic subtlety had suggested to him to raise. Probably, since the learning of the law of street obstruction forms no very complicated head of English jurisprudence, the worthy fish-porter's contention, whatever it was, would not have elevated the proceedings against him into a "leading case." It would, however, be hardly safe to say that the whole of the "corpus juris" administered daily in our police-courts is of such clearness and certainty as to contain no flaws of which an astute defendant may not take advantage. On the contrary, it may be reasonably believed that only the sound judgment and strong common sense with which most of our metropolitan magistrates are endowed prevents the ambiguities and imperfections of our urban law from producing much more inconvenience than actually results from them. The rough-and-ready justice administered in the London police-courts avoids innumerable difficulties into which a pedant or a precisian would be apt to stumble every day. A metropolitan magistrate, as a rule, takes very much the same practical and sensible view of his functions as a capable and experienced police-constable takes of his. Both recognise the fact that the conduct of the daily business of a city of four or five millions cannot possibly be regulated by a mere rigid enforcement of the letter of statutory enactments. It must always and necessarily be a matter of "give and take," a question of effecting a rational accommodation between the claims of private liberty on one hand and those of public order on the other; and it is well understood by those who know and do their duty best in this regard that a wise and equitable exercise of these powers of arbitration is of much more importance than an over-punctilious solicitude for the literal enforcement of the letter. When the police show any excess of zeal in this latter direction, they are very properly checked by the magistrates; if they err on the side of laxity, they can be gently stimulated; and the combined effect of these two processes is to make our successful regulation of the multitudinous street life of the Metropolis a feat on which we may justly pride ourselves. The credit is due, as we have already said, to those who administer the law and not to those who make it, the latter, indeed, being too much given to intermeddling with the business in a manner far from judicious. It is not so very many years, for instance, since the Legislature was moved to pass a Street Traffic Regulation Act, of which the object, among other things, was to restrict the loading and unloading of merchandise from shops and warehouses to certain specified hours of the day. Parliament presumably meant this enactment to be enforced after it was passed. It never has been, and probably never will be. By common consent of those who have to administer the law and those who have to obey it, the statute has been allowed to become a dead letter. Had it been worked as we presume the Legislature intended it to be—namely, as a law of strict obligation—it is not too much to say that the conduct of many trades in London would have been rendered impossible.

A state of things, however, in which the mischiefs of inconsiderate law-making are tempered by the exercise of a sort of magisterial "dispensing power" can hardly be regarded as ideally satisfactory. It is not to the interest of good government that laws should be enacted which cannot be, and are only tolerated because they will not be, enforced. In the truly scandalous case, for instance, on which we commented yesterday, an administrator of the law had no other choice than to sit tamely by while a worthless husband robbed his wife of that part of her property not recently acquired. There have not, it is to be hoped, been many miscarriages of legislation so distressing and disgraceful; but in forms less gross they have been plentiful enough of late years, and it is quite possible that there are many still remaining undetected and awaiting the operation of chance or the manœuvres of cunning to bring them to light. Every Parliamentary Session, even those which it is the fashion to describe as barren, adds a considerable number of new enactments to the Statute Book. The Sessions that escape the reproach of barrenness are simply those in which one or more of these additions are of a politically contentious or otherwise exciting or sensational character; but enactments which pass comparatively unnoticed need not on that account exercise a less important bearing on the rights, the interests, and the happiness of hundreds of thousands of the Queen's lieges. To say that these statutory experiments—for such is often their character—on the welfare of the community are always conceived, or that they are invariably carried out, with care and circumspection, would be not only to defy the evidence of fact, but to disregard all considerations of antecedent probability. Men who have no adequate acquaintance with the law which they undertake to reform originate many of these Bills, and only a select few of them—those, that is to say, which are referred to the Standing Committees—are assured of receiving that amount of consideration and criticism at the hands of experts which every proposed alteration of the law ought, as a matter of course, to involve. With the above exceptions, the great bulk of the measures passed every year are discussed, amended, and reamended after a haphazard fashion which provides no sort of security either that the new law when passed shall not be discovered to be in conflict with what already exists, or, what is even worse, to annul valuable provisions of that law without replacing them by any effective substitute. This is a condition of things which has prevailed in the English Parliament for years, and which ought not to be tolerated in any Parliament for a single day. In one of the deliberative assemblies of the ancient world a legislator was compelled to bring in his Bill with a halter round his neck, which was tightened if the House rejected the measure on the second reading. That was a serious check upon rash proposals; but, even if we were to embody the usage in the new Rules of Procedure, we could hardly carry it so far as to compel the Members whose names are "on the back of a Bill" to go about with roped necks until the Act had stood the test of judicial examination. The appointment, however, of a Committee of Revision, consisting of legal experts, to whom all Bills should be submitted for final collation and comparison with the existing law, before taking their place on the Statute Book, is an eminently practicable reform, which has been often but vainly demanded.

Cuddie Headrigg's beau-ideal of physical discomfort was that of a toad under a harrow, "when ilka tuith gave her a tig"; and perhaps the most typical representative of the traditional toad is at present that much-maltreated and long-suffering creature John Chinaman. Innumerable are the "tigs" which the patient yellow man with the pigtail has to bear from domestic oppression and foreign disparagement. In the Flowery Land itself the vermilion pencil continuously assumes the form of a bamboo which writes rescripts on John's back. In California, where the white "hoodlums" have long been in the habit of twisting his pig-tail, and pelting him with mud and brickbats, the Celestial now finds himself an object of legislative ostracism; and it must be by way of Manitoba that his brethren will enter the United States, if they succeed in gaining admission to that unfriendly country at all. Nor is he better off in our great Australasian dependencies. New South Wales, Victoria, South and Western Australia, Queensland, and New Zealand will have nought of the industrious, frugal, willing Asiatic, who makes such a capital workman and such an indifferent citizen; although his chief crime against Anglo-Saxonism is that he is willing to do for ninepence that which the white man does reluctantly for a shilling. Even in Singapore and the Straits Settlements, where Orientals of every race find tolerance, the Chinaman is generally voted a nuisance. The much-persecuted man has, it is true, his consolations. Amid the vapid fumes of opium, he can forget the scorn and cruelty of the "Melican man" and the spiteful outrages of the Australian larrikin; and especially, wherever he goes and however low and abject may be his estate, he may always indulge his love of speculation by gambling at his adored "Fantan." The late Dr. Wells Williams has left a detailed account of this celebrated game, of which one of the chief attractions would seem to be that it is so simple that the smallest child can understand its chances. The banker at Fantan has before him a pile of bright, thin copper coins or "cash," of which he takes a double handful and, laying them on the table, covers them with a bowl. The players then stake their money on the remainder—one, two, three, or nothing—after the pile has been divided by four; thus it will be seen that this game, to which many millions of Chinamen are passionately addicted, is little more than an extension of the immemorial "odd or even." The Chinese Government, which is theoretically the wisest and most beneficent in the world, has over and over again prohibited Fantan as an amusement leading directly to the pawnbroker's shop, to pauperism, to swindling, and to suicide; still Fantan continues to flourish like a green bay-tree, not only in the Middle Kingdom, but in Hong-kong, in Macao, and indeed wherever Chinamen congregate.

Certainly the picture of a Caucaso-Mongolian Fantan house at the Portuguese settlement just named, drawn by a recent writer in a newspaper published in the East, possesses considerable graphic merits. It must be premised that the local government derives a very large revenue from farming or selling by auction the sole right to keep Fantan houses, which have consequently become a notorious rendezvous for all the "noble sportsmen" of South China. The leading Fantan house is a rickety shanty, lighted by malodorous and smoky petroleum lamps; the Chinese bankers and croupiers are inclined to corpulence, and are naked from the waist upwards; the punters, or "galerie," as the French gaming technology more elegantly terms them, are the usual tag-rag and bobtail of Chinese humanity, unutterably filthy and evil-smelling; while, high up above, in a railed gallery, are groups of Macao ladies and Celestial dames, cracking almonds and melon-seeds and redolent of cocoa-nut oil. The chances at Fantan are largely in favour of the banker, who is in addition entitled to a royalty of seven per cent. on all winnings. Though the game is said to be fair enough, it is whispered that foul dealing is possible by two coins being ingeniously stuck together and easily separated when necessary, or by means of a confederate ensconced inside the box which serves as a table, and who at a given signal slips up a coin through the mat beneath the pile of cash. For many years the Fantan shops of Macao have spread ruin, desolation, and death broadcast. The Chinaman who has wagered and lost his last coin, his upper garments, his house, his rice-patch, his wife and children even, on the fatal substitute for the tapis vert, rushes from the Fantan table to turn pirate, or perhaps to take an overdose of opium and find an end of his woes in suicide. More desperate spirits hang themselves to the boughs of the trees which surround this den of iniquity. Thieves and pirates, shopkeepers and Canton mandarins, ladies, boatwomen, public functionaries of Macao, and wild young Englishmen from Hong Kong, make their way to this terrible sink of vice, and generally find ruin there. A hundred thousand pounds is the ordinary price paid by the banker for the privilege of keeping a Fantan hell in Macao—a town where there is little trade or industry or source of wealth beyond the infected revenue from the gambling-houses. Surely this is a most terribly realistic picture. Can it be matched anywhere, we wonder, in Western climes? Suppose the graphic writer who has favoured us with such a lurid tableau of the Fantan shop at Macao were to try his hand at limning the leading traits of a certain casino at Monte Carlo, in the principality of Monaco. The extremely exiguous territory ruled over by the illustrious head of the House of Grimaldi has neither trade, nor industry, nor source of wealth to speak of beyond the very large revenue paid by the proprietors of the Bank of Monte Carlo for the privilege of keeping the most splendid and the most profligate gambling-hell in the world. In no tumble-down shanty, illumined by flaring petroleum lamps, are the green baize tables spread where rouleaux of napoleons and five-franc pieces invite a cosmopolitan company to try their luck at trente-et-quarante and roulette—the last a game which is nearly as facile as Fantan. You have only to stake your piece on red or black, or odd or even, or passe or manque, and, if you win, the courteous banker hands you double your stake; you have only to back any one of thirty-six numbers or zero, and if your forecast be verified you will win thirty-five times your stake. You may break the bank if you have a run of luck and continually stake the maximum; or, on the other hand, you may be ruined "lock, stock, and barrel," "crevé," burst, cleaned out, and you may go forth to pawn your coat, or forge bills, or pass bogus cheques, or pick pockets, or murder a man for his gold, or take prussic acid, or hang yourself to a tree in one of the most exquisitely beautiful gardens that line the shores of the beautiful Mediterranean. Not one red cent does the Administration care what you do, provided that you take off your hat when you enter the gambling saloons, and that you behave yourself properly till you have broken the bank or have been broken by it. The saloons themselves are astoundingly magnificent, and glow with gilding and artistic decoration. Here the ladies are not relegated to an upper gallery; they mingle, on the contrary, with the gay throng, and stake their money with charming amenity; while now and again an old feminine hand will playfully steal the stakes on which you have omitted to keep a very sharp eye. Altogether, the crowd, instead of reeking of opium and cocoanut-oil, smell beautifully. It is of the scent of jockey club, and cherry-blossom, and stephanotis that they are redolent. They are well dressed, they wear kid gloves and varnished boots; the croupiers are clean-shaven gentlemen in broadcloth and spotless linen; but it is the same devil who presides in the sparkling saloons of Monte Carlo and in the squalid Fantan shops of Macao.

"Gaming," says a great English writer, "appears to be a universal passion. The savage and the civilised, the illiterate and the learned are alike captivated by the hope of accumulating wealth without the labours of industry." In support of this assertion, the writer in question proceeds to describe the peculiar gambling proclivities of the principal nations of the globe; but it has been pointed out by a Bombay journal that in the category of gaming nationalities the natives of India are not enumerated. In the immense city of Bombay, however, gaming, according to our contemporary, obtains in almost every conceivable form, from the aristocratic betting of the lottery-room to the vulgar three-card trick or chuck-farthing of the bazaars. There is, moreover, one particular mode of speculation widely popular among a large section of the native population during the monsoon season, and which proves, besides, a profitable source of employment to the native shroff. This is the sutta or rain-gambling, which seems to be as easy as Fantan, with the additional advantage that it affords no field for sharpers, and that the chances of the player winning depend solely on his powers of prognostication. The pivot of the game is the fact of its raining or not within a given period. Formerly sutta-gamblers used to congregate in the streets, but, as this was considered by the police to be obstructive to the traffic, it occurred to a shrewd Bania, who owned a shed and a plot of vacant ground at Pydhonie, to set up a kind of pluvial Tattersall's, where the rain-gamblers could indulge in their propensity without molestation. The appliances for the sport are exceedingly simple, consisting only of two rain-gauges of somewhat different construction: the first is a long gutter running along the eaves of the shed, at one end of which there is a spout of the form of an inverted cone, through which the water trickles when the rain only comes down in a drizzle; but when it pours the water shoots over the end of the gutter, and it is on this latter event happening that the bets are made. The second implement is a rudely constructed rain-gauge planted in the centre of a trough, supported on four pillars some seven feet high. This sutta saloon is always densely crowded, and the influx of gamblers has become so great, and has led to so many criminal acts of embezzlement and breaches of trust, that the judicial authorities have interfered to suppress the entire institution as a nuisance. It will probably be put down and break out again, if not in a saloon at least in a cellar, if not in the highways at least in the byeways, for next to the universality of gambling there is no more marked characteristic about the vice than the impossibility of finally abolishing it. The Bombay press may call loudly for the prosecution of the ingenious Bania who established a sutta saloon at Pydhonie; but has our contemporary, we wonder, ever heard of the West-end club where two gentlemen are said to have made a bet of five hundred pounds as to which of two drops of rain trickling in parallel lines down a window-pane would come to the bottom first? It is only, perhaps, by the aid of the grossest form of superstition that mankind could possibly be weaned from the vice of gambling. If the Gothic devil—horns, hoofs, flaming eyes, forked tail, and all—could only be persuaded to put in an appearance at a gaming-table, Fantan would disappear, Monte Carlo would collapse, and sutta-gambling would cease. Like the clerk of the weather and the wealthy uncle in a comedy, the arch-enemy is often talked about but never seen; and, failing his sulphurous presence, mankind contrive to gamble their coats off their backs and their souls out of their bodies.

NEWS FROM VIENNA.

ARRIVAL OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

VIENNA, Sept. 10.

The Prince of Wales, whom the Vienna newspapers style "Crown-Prince Albert of England," arrived here this morning shortly before seven. His Royal Highness was met at the station by General Keith Fraser, General Ellis, Prince Louis Esterhazy, and Captain Count Breda. The Prince drove in a court carriage to the Grand-Hotel. Sir Augustus Paget and Prince Hohenlohe, Master of the Ceremonies, called on his Royal Highness in the course of the morning.

At eleven o'clock the Emperor called at the Grand-Hotel, and at half-past twelve his Majesty received the Prince in official audience at the Palace. Crown-Prince Rudolf afterwards called on his Royal Highness, who lunched at the British Embassy and dined this evening with the Emperor.

The German Emperor has not yet intimated the precise date of his arrival in Vienna, having merely given it to be understood that he hoped to be here in the beginning of October. His Majesty will leave Berlin for Stuttgart on the 25th or 26th of this month, and will afterwards go to Munich before coming on to Vienna. On leaving this country Kaiser Wilhelm will visit King Humbert at Rome.

It is a source of surprise abroad that the German Emperor has not yet announced his intention of going to London.

The Tenth Synod of the "Old Catholics" assembled on Saturday in Vienna. A service after the new but incomplete ritual of the "Old Catholic" Church was held in the suburban German Evangelical Chapel, and was well attended. "Old Catholicism" would seem to be gaining ground in the Austrian Empire. There are at present 10,000 communicants, the majority of whom are Bohemians. The Synod resolved to introduce in the various scattered congregations a uniform ritual and liturgy. The Church vestments are to be of the plainest description. A resolution was passed to petition the Government, through Parliament, for a State-subvention. A bishop is to be appointed at the head of the Austrian "Old Catholic" communities, and an international communion between the co-religionists of Austria, the Anglican High-Church, and the "Old Catholics" of Germany is contemplated.

A Zigeuner, calling himself "George Raphael the First, King of the Gipsies, has addressed the following petition to the Emperor Franz Joseph:

> Imperial and Royal Majesty, Most gracious Sovereign—The undersigned ventures to kneel at your throne and humbly to beg that Your Majesty will graciously grant him the title of "King of the descendants of Pharaoh." I base my petition on the following grounds: The sons of Pharaoh in Austria-Hungary wander about the common Fatherland; they recognise no law, they will not work, but stray from village to village under false names. I, as the direct descendant of Pharaoh, wish to subjugate them, to make them loyal subjects of the country, and cause them to volunteer their services for the army. All I want to do is to prevent them from wandering about from village to village, and to blend them with the honest population of this land. I will teach them to be faithful subjects of your Majesty. It will be my chief aim at every opportunity to prove that loyalty and attachment for the august person of your Imperial and Royal Majesty and for our sacred Fatherland which I have always felt.

> The faithful servant of his Imperial and Royal Majesty my most gracious Sovereign.

DESTRUCTIVE EARTHQUAKE.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

ATHENS, Sept. 10.

Two violent shocks of earthquake occurred yesterday evening at Vostitza, in the Northern Peloponnesus. Great destruction was caused to property.

Troops have been sent to the scene to aid the inhabitants, and a supply of tents has also been forwarded for the use of the homeless people.

Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Fenton have returned to 29, Brook-street, Grosvenor-square.

A Golden Wedding.—Earl and Countess Fitzwilliam yesterday celebrated their Golden Wedding at Wentworth Woodhouse, the proceedings taking the form of a garden party, for which over 2,000 invitations had been issued. During the afternoon presents were made to the Earl and Countess.

Mr. Henry Irving in Glasgow.—Our Glasgow correspondent telegraphed last night:—"This evening the Theatre Royal, Glasgow, which had been closed for some years, was opened, under the management of Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, by Mr. Henry Irving and the Lyceum Company with 'Faust.' Mr. Howard delivered a brief address before the performance began. The play was, as usual, received with great favour, and Mr. Irving had an immense reception. At the close, after a short speech from Mr. Irving, the whole Lyceum Company sang 'God save the Queen,' amid much enthusiasm."

PARIS DAY BY DAY.

[BY SPECIAL WIRE.]

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

PARIS, Monday Night.

Old Parisians and inveterate Boulevardiers have at last fallen upon evil times. The September Sun is everything that can be desired; the Parisian landscape has a mellow Autumnal look; but it is almost impossible for a man in a faultless coat and irreproachable linen to get about without receiving a sudden sprinkling of whitewash. The masons and plasterers are busier than ever, and even the stuccoed exterior of the Jockey-Club is in their hands, much to the disgust of the dégustateurs who sit outside the Grand-Café as well as of the veteran clubmen, many of whom remained in Paris throughout the Summer. "I can't stand it any longer!" said one of the members of the Jockey to-day. "All this plastering and hammering is too much for me. I am off to Vichy, Clichy, Asnieres—anywhere out of this world of dust and mortar!" The old clubman will have many followers just now, for the best part of the Boulevards can only be enjoyed at night, when the "working-man" has gone home.

Lord and Lady Salisbury left the Hôtel Chatham this morning for the Chalet Cecil at Le Puy, near Dieppe, after having remained but one night in Paris on their return from Royat.

President Carnot left Fontainebleau this morning for a triumphant progress through the rustic hamlets and happy orchards of Normandy, and he has certainly selected the best time of the year for a visit to the land of William the Conqueror. At noon M. Carnot arrived at Evreux, where he was received enthusiastically; but on the way to Caen both the President and M. Floquet, who is journeying with him, heard several shouts of "Vive Boulanger!" amid the vivats which greeted them at Bernay. The Presidential party arrived at Caen this afternoon, and attended a grand banquet there this evening.

Another head rolled into the executioner's basket at La Roquette this morning, and Parisians awoke to hear that Monsieur de Paris had been busy once more with his guillotine. Hardly had M. Deibler returned from Corsica, where he executed the bandit Rocchini, than he was summoned to the office of the Procureur de la République in order to receive his orders for the "guillotining" of the soldier Schumacher. The felon was twenty-two years old, and, while on furlough in Paris last March, he strangled an old woman Madame Vignon, a friend of his mother and robbed her. He was condemned to death at the Assizes of the Department of the Seine in July, and down to the last moment expected a reprieve. President Carnot has, however, shown himself less leniently disposed towards murderers than his predecessor—M. Jules Grévy—whose clemency was so proverbial among criminals that human life may be said, without much exaggeration, to have been cheap in Paris during his tenure of office as Chief Magistrate and Head of the State. Schumacher, the murderer of the Widow Vignon, maintained a quiet and humble attitude during his incarceration in the Dépot of the condemned. He showed no disposition towards bravado, like many low Parisian criminals, and he walked with unfaltering spirit to the scaffold. Very few people knew that the execution was about to take place—the crime, in fact, having been almost forgotten in the whirligig of events which have happened since the trial of the condemned man. Besides, there was no element of mystery, no extraordinary and sensational details about it. The murderer was a commonplace criminal, and his victim was an old woman. Hence we were spared the disgraceful scenes which were enacted during the execution of Pranzini, the murderer of the demi-mondaine, of her servant, and of the latter's child. Only about fifty persons were outside the police cordon at La Roquette, and most of these were persons who lived in the neighbourhood. M. Deibler and his assistants arrived in good time on the place of execution and raised the guillotine by the light of torches. When all was ready Monsieur de Paris tried the knife by pulling it up and down, and then he went into the prison to take over the felon. Schumacher was sound asleep, having gone to bed little thinking that he was on the brink of the grave. He had even chatted with his warders before falling asleep, and had drawn roseate pictures of his future life in New Caledonia, where he intended to reform and to become a useful and hard-working colonist. At twenty minutes past five, just as the Sun was beginning to pierce through the last lingering shades of night, the wretch was aroused from slumber by the Governor of the Prison, who had entered his cell, accompanied by some police-officials. "Courage, Schumacher!" said M. Beauquesne in his usual stereotyped manner, "the President of the Republic has rejected your appeal for pardon, and you must die this morning. Allons, du courage!" The condemned man started wildly from his couch with a blanched face, and said, "I mean to have courage." Then he dressed himself, the prison-barber cut his hair, and the Protestant chaplain of the prison, M. Arboux, began to pray at his side. M. Deibler a moment after bound his victim, and the funeral procession was speedily formed. Schumacher in reply to the clergyman said he fully repented of his crime, and asked pardon of God and Man. On reaching the place of execution outside the prison-gates the felon shuddered as he saw the guillotine, but he still walked on to Death in a composed manner. When he was on the bascule M. Arboux created a rather painful impression by twice embracing the criminal, and several of those who were present cried out, with an officiousness which made matters still worse, "Enough!" The clergyman then quickly drew back, and two seconds after the head of the criminal rolled into the zinc-basket with a gruesome thud which those who have once heard it cannot soon forget. Finally, the remains were placed in a receptacle filled with sawdust, which drank up the streaming blood, and were taken for burial to Ivry, no member of the Academy of Medicine having made an application to experiment on them.

In some quarters of Paris the bakers have already raised the price of their bread. They argue that as the wheat-crop is exceptionally bad this year they might as well take time by the forelock. Later on they will not be able to sell their loaves at the current rate, so what objection can there possibly be to their doing now what they will be forced to do hereafter? But this sort of reasoning is by no means to the taste of the public. Provisions in the French metropolis are sufficiently dear all the year round. Panem et Circenses! We are to have the Exhibition next Spring, and the working-classes see no reason why, when "All the World and his Wife" are making high holiday here, they should be stinted in their bread supply. It is certainly curious that so soon after the voting of the New Protectionist tariffs this question should perforce be raised. Only a short time before the champions of Protection won their victory a distinguished economist wrote: "If we had a bad harvest what would be done?" The harvest is undoubtedly bad. Happily, there is a saving clause in the Law which sets forth that under exceptional circumstances the Government may, if Parliament be not sitting, suspend the whole or a part of the Law by a Decree of the President of the Republic. The attention of the Ministry is already being drawn to this clause, while several Deputies have announced their intention of bringing forward a proposal for the abolition or suspension of the duty on foreign corn. It is a notorious fact that in many of the large towns, including Lyons and Marseilles, Nantes and Toulon, the voting of the Law of March 29 was promptly followed by a rise in the price of bread. The local authorities were compelled by indignant protests to interfere. Now, by a curious coincidence, the merits or demerits of the new Law are being put to a severe test. Oddly enough there is no duty on bread, and along the Belgian frontier loaves have for some time past been imported into this country. The trade is increasing, and, unless a remedy be found in the removal of the impot on foreign corn, it may assume formidable proportions. Parisians may eat at their déjeuners rolls baked on the other side of the frontier in the small hours of the morning. If this is what Parliament calls "protecting" home industries, it is easily satisfied. Of course it can always have recourse to the expedient of putting a duty on foreign bread, but the people must be fed somehow. The only alternative seems to be to remove the duty on foreign corn, at least until a more convenient season.

The latest device for attracting the attention of possible purchasers which has been adopted by several Paris shopkeepers is an "immovable boy." Outside a clothier's, for instance, the "boy" stands without moving a muscle, and bears on his carcase the newest fashion in blouses or corduroys. Passers-by are easily attracted by the remarkable figure, which they take to be an effigy in wax-work, or a tableau-vivant. The boy has been well-drilled and lives up to his work. He smiles not, neither does he wink, nor does he betray by the slightest sign, token, or movement that he has anything in common with the ordinary palpitating and effervescing specimen of humanity, the "Boulevard boy." The device draws, for spectators are usually lost in amazement at the impassive features of the breathing simulacrum of a dummy-figure, and, from gazing at the youth's rigid and sphinx-like countenance, they are naturally led to inspect his model blouse, hat, tie, trousers, and boots.

Smoking, as is well-known, is a habit which is not confined to men in France and other Continental countries. Many Parisiennes now indulge in cigarettes even in their boudoirs, and a recent writer, who is herself a smoker, has drawn up a set of rules for the benefit of fashionable female votaries of the "Weed." Some of these regulations are rather peculiar, and the wonder is that it should be at all necessary to insist upon their observance. Never, says the Guide, Philosopher, and Friend of fashionable fumeuses—never smoke in a restaurant or out of doors, even when in company with your husbands. Never light a cigarette after a five o'clock tea, even if your most intimate friends only are present. Smoke after your meals at home, either in a room ad hoc or in your boudoir. Do not hold the cigarette between your teeth or at the sides of your mouths. Such low tricks are even unworthy of well-bred men, and you must be mindful to carry the cigarette gracefully to your lips, and to blow gentle wreaths of etherialised essence around you from your mouths, or, if you like, down from your noses. Be extremely careful not to allow any ashes to fall on your dresses or your carpets, and be sure that your cigarette-holders and their cases, your match-boxes, your ash-trays, and your general appliances for the enjoyment of tobacco be as delicate and artistic as all objects used by ladies should be. By attention to these rules, concludes their compiler, a fumeuse may frequently make herself additionally interesting and piquante. Blowing clouds of smoke from the nose may even develope into a most fascinating operation, provided the smoker have a pretty proboscis, and that the profile of it only be seen by the admiring cavalier or suitor as the blue-grey vapour descends delicately from the nostrils. The Guide might have added an injunction to the fumeuses which would be well-worth their attention had she said, "Go and see the Hottentot women smoke in the Jardin des Plantes." The three or four brown-skinned beauties from the Bush who are now exhibiting themselves daily to Parisians have a way of inhaling and emitting tobacco-smoke which would be worthy of the emulation of the most artistically-disposed Parisian fumeuse. It is true that the Hottentot ladies smoke big cigars which they beg from visitors, and that they do not disdain the short black pipe of clay, but they have a fine way of manipulating the numerous cigarettes which are also given to them gratis and they emit the smoke from their rather wide nostrils in a perfectly natural and even graceful manner. A lesson in smoking from these fumeuses would therefore be of the greatest practical value to the ladies for whom the recent rules and regulations above alluded to are intended.

The First Report of the engineers of the Paris, Lyons, and Mediterranean Company relative to the terrible collision at Velars has been sent in, but it does not throw a single ray of light on the causes of the accident. The document sets forth that the curve of the metals was slightly altered at the spot where the collision took place, and that the second-class carriage, in which were most of the travellers who were killed or injured, followed two wagons; that it weighed eleven tons; was dashed back on a sleeping-car weighing seventeen tons; was literally lifted off the rails; thrown perpendicularly on the line, and finally smashed between the two parts of the train.

How long has Britain possessed a Navy? Two fragments of inscriptions relating to a Roman officer who had served in the British Navy have just been discovered at Boulogne-sur-Mer. This gentleman flourished in the reign of the Emperor Claudius, when a fleet kept up constant communication between Britain and Gaul—Boulogne being the Continental station. The fragments were found by Doctor Hamy, and M. Héron de Villefosse, in announcing their discovery to the Academy of Inscriptions, pointed out that they threw an interesting light on the relations between the Continent and Britain at that remote period. What was this fleet, and how was it manned? Was it a British fleet or a fleet for Britain? It was possibly a compromise between the two. It is to be hoped that further discoveries will fully elucidate this question.

A curious accident occurred yesterday during the manœuvres of the Sixteenth Army-corps in the Department of the Tarn. There was a number of spectators in carriages. The horses harnessed to one of these vehicles, frightened by the firing, plunged and kicked, finally alighting in a ditch. A dragoon attached to the escort of the general in command also rolled with his charger into this self-same trench. The alarm was contagious. Other horses showed signs of impatience, and some started off, amid the cries and screams of the ladies in the carriages. Ere, however, the majority of the animals had fairly bolted, Lieutenant Mercador, a Spanish Hussar-officer, who happened to be riding in the opposite direction, sprang from the saddle, threw himself resolutely at the heads of the first pair of frightened steeds, and succeeded in stopping them. His courageous intervention—for which he was warmly thanked by Generals Ferron and Vincendon—in all probability averted a series of accidents. As it is, several persons were upset into this unlucky ditch, their horses sustaining a certain amount of injury.

The manager of the Odéon Theatre intends to open the season with the terribly realistic piece of "Crime and Punishment," adapted from the novel of the great Russian writer, Dostoievsky. The play ought to draw, and no doubt will do so, not only by reason of its intrinsic merits but because it is Russian and was written by one who has been ably presented to French readers. Dostoievsky was a peasant of the peasants—an utterly worn-out and ground-down serf, with blunted nose, blinking eyes, and pinched face. His translator says he never saw such an expression of concentrated pain and misery on any man's visage as that worn by the author of "Crime and Punishment." To add to his sufferings Dostoievsky became epileptic owing to his having been on the brink of the grave as it were. He was accused of conspiracy in 1849, and was ordered to be shot. Just as the soldiers were about to fire at him, his reprieve arrived, and he was sent to Siberia. On his liberation he became a soldier. His "Crime and Punishment" when published made a great sensation. The effect produced by the book was such that a Moscow student murdered a female money-lender under the same circumstances as those imagined by the novelist. When Dostoievsky died in 1881, at the age of sixty, he received a funeral almost as magnificent as that of General Skobeleff. His wife, whom he married in Siberia, still lives. "Crime et Chatiment" will be put on the boards of the Odéon, not in acts but in tableaux.

On the Bourse to-day the last quotations were: Three per Cents., 84f 47½c (no change); Four and a Half per Cents., 106f 5c (no change); Italians, 97f 85c (a fall of 17½c); Turks, 15f 00c (a rise of 20c); Spanish-Exteriors, 75f 40c; Egyptian-Unified, 436f 25c; ditto Preference, 521f; and Ottoman-Bank, 550f. Suez-Canal Shares closed at 2,245f, and Rio Tinto at 579f. Home funds were dull to-day, and several of the foreign stocks were weak, including Italians, in which there was an important fall. Turks, on the other hand, were very active, as well as Egyptians. Suez Canal shares underwent no change.

UNITED STATES.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]

San Francisco, Sept. 9.—Two blocks of buildings situated in the main street of this city, including several foundries and factories, have been completely destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at a million dollars, and 2,000 hands have been thrown out of work.

Jacksonville, Sept. 9.—Forty-nine fresh cases of yellow fever and seven deaths have been recorded here for the twenty-four hours ending at six o'clock this evening.

The New Wimbledon.—Yesterday the Shrewsbury Town Council unanimously resolved to petition the Council of the National Rifle Association to select Cannock Chase for the annual meetings of that association, on the ground that the site was a desirable one, not only on account of its intrinsic merits as a rifle range, but also for its central position, which makes it easily accessible from all parts of the kingdom.

Earl Cadogan will succeed Viscount Cranbrook as Minister in attendance upon the Queen in Scotland on the 17th inst. His Lordship leaves London for Balmoral on Saturday.

Sir Saul Samuel, K.C.M.G., C.B., Agent-General for New South Wales, with Lady Samuel and family, returned to London from Sydney on Saturday last.

Canon Quirk, vicar of Rotherham, has, it is stated, definitely declined the offer of the living of Spitalfields, made to him by the patron, Mr. T. F. Buxton.

Reuter's Agency states: "In the Nijni Novgorod telegram of Sept. 9, relating to Russian trade, the last sentence should read as follows: 'They also recommend that British commerce should not be admitted into Siberia by way of the Yenisei river.'"

The miners' delegates of Scotland met yesterday afternoon at Glasgow, and decided that, considering the prospect of the coal trade, they should call upon the masters to advance the wages 10 per cent., equal to 6d per day, and also to recommend the men to work only five days a week and eight hours per day.

A Reuter's telegram, dated Elisabetgrad, Sept. 10, states: "Following the course of the military manœuvres, the Czar and Czarina arrived yesterday afternoon at Novaja-Praga."

IS MARRIAGE A FAILURE ?

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—Where marriage is a failure the fault in most cases rests with the man. It seems the correct thing nowadays for a man, when he wants a partner to share his joys and sorrows, to fix his thoughts upon some woman who, his most unobservant friend could tell him, would not make him at all a suitable wife. Her he endows with all sorts of imaginary charms and good qualities, marries her after a month or two months' engagement, and awakens to find he has been, as he calls it, "deceived." Who is to blame—the woman, or the man who asked her to marry him? This is the root of so many of the marriage failures we hear about. Though I do not quite agree with one of our modern faddists, who says the contracting parties should know each other seven years before marriage, still, I am sure a thorough knowledge of each other's tastes and characters is a first essential to happiness.

The remedy is entirely in the hands of the stronger sex. They are the choosers. We can only "stand and wait," and surely any man of ordinary common sense can discern between the gold and the dross in such a momentous question, and there are plenty to choose from, goodness knows! Then, again, "good husbands make good wives," but when the wife is neglected for male companions, and the home and children are not appreciated, she gets disheartened, and gradually loses all brightness and energy. There are many good husbands who do keep some of their time for home use, and, tell me, are not such men generally the best satisfied with their wives and homes?

Your correspondent, "An Observer," seems to me to hit a great truth when he says our domestic social life is wrong. We want more variety of study and amusement in our home lives. This is a question which concerns everyone of us, and can only be dealt with by each one giving it individual consideration. I may say, in conclusion, that perhaps my experience is not worth quoting, as it is only observational. I am not "a disappointed one," nor "an indignant one." I am just waiting for some one to come along between whom and myself there will be "an affinity," and then, if he asks me, shan't I make him happy!—and if he does not I must remain for ever—Yours

AN UNAPPROPRIATED BLESSING.

Liverpool, Sept. 8.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—Mrs. Caird's original article I have not seen, but it strikes me the question might with more justice be put, "are those who marry failures?" My experience, after thirty-five years as a clergyman in town and country, is that they are so, in proportion as they fail to realise and carry out the beau ideal contained in the much abused old Marriage Service, which itself, after all, is but a deduction from the word of God. In reply to "Constance D.," I would say that service is intended to be studied, not alone upon the eve of one's marriage, but from the time one conceives the intention of "taking that holy estate of matrimony upon them," and the addresses to the assembled company of friends at the commencement and the close prove that it is intended as a much needed instruction to all such persons. The failures in married people to adhere to "the vow and covenant then betwixt them made," and the entering into one of the most solemn and important contracts of their lives without having given any previous consideration to the terms of the agreement, will account for almost all instances in which it "turns out to be a failure." For example, if the preliminary address were but taken in time as a guide to the selection on either side, instead of hasty, ill-assorted, or imprudent matches, they would be "enterprised and taken in hand reverently, discreetly, advisedly, soberly, and in the fear of God," and the three special "causes for matrimony" would be "duly considered" beforehand. Again, when the time has arrived for the actual union to take place, a shrewd suspicion may evidently be observed in the service that when present love, mixed with passion, has somewhat expended itself, a reaction may follow, and that pure love—"ripening," as one of your correspondents has beautifully said, "into affection"—may not then take its place. Hence the stress laid upon this particular point in the oft-repeated and varied questions put by the minister and in the "troth" pledged to one another, and they are thus finally welded in an indissoluble bond by the wedding-ring, with which the husband makes himself over to his "better half" in person and in property. Were there no failures in carrying out, in all conditions of life, and under all circumstances, these marriage vows, we should not so often hear of "cruelty" in the divorce courts, and divorce itself would be never sought were the promise, "Forsaking all other, keep thee only unto her (or him)," faithfully observed; and so, not satisfied with this, the service proceeds, in invoking oft-repeated blessings upon the couple, to pray so often, that "as Isaac and Rebecca lived faithfully together, so these persons may surely perform and keep the vow and covenant betwixt them made, and may ever remain in perfect love and peace together, and live according to Thy laws." Many a time, under a sense of this necessity of the case, from my own experience, have I used the liberty given me at the close of the service to address a few simple but earnest words to those just married on the supreme importance for their future happiness of their lifelong attention to the vows they had taken, telling them that, so long as they mutually upheld the just equilibrium of the husband loving the wife, as now become "part of himself, honouring her as the weaker vessel," and the wife subordinating her own will to him who has now become "her head," so long would peace, happiness, and prosperity follow them in this life, whereas, in sinning against one another and against the laws of God, they would, by their own failures, make their marriage a failure also.—I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

WARDEN F. STUBBS, M.A., Incumbent of St. Columba.

Liverpool, Sept. 8.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—I beg leave to appear as a witness before your commission on matrimony in two capacities—first, as an Anglo-Indian, who has spent by far the larger part of his life, from childhood onwards, in the East, and has, as a solitary European among natives, enjoyed unusual opportunities of watching the result of the almost unlimited varieties of connubial customs permitted by our extraordinarily tolerant Government; secondly, as a European whose married life has been subjected to the strain of separation from wife and children which an Indian career too often involves. In the first capacity, then, I have seen in working order many of the expedients which the more hopeful of your correspondents suggest as panaceas for our own marriage customs. "Free love" I have seen among the Kartabhajas and other Vishnuite sects of Eastern India who have revolted from the extreme rigour of orthodox Hinduism. "Love," says Sir W. W. Hunter, "is the foundation of their faith, and hence they consider each other as dadas and didis, brothers and sisters." On many a high road in Bengal will you meet Vaisnav and Vaisnavi, each with shaven poll, joined by no rites save those of common consent, and free to separate whenever the whim seizes them or some better partner offers. Again, among the Manipuris and other semi-Hinduised tribes of the N.E. frontier I have seen unmarried girls who were allowed a licence of intercourse with the bachelors of their village which would shock the tolerance of even an American mother. Yet no race more sternly punishes breaches of married faith, as I might show by starting instances were I not afraid of trespassing on your patience. Yet again, in the fertile valley of Assam, you will find substituted for the infant marriages which are the bane of orthodox Hinduism a system of infant betrothal, which would seem to give the young people ample opportunity of changing their minds before it is too late. If facility of divorce be your aim and goal, you will find it, so far as the husband is concerned, among our Mussulman fellow subjects, who permit a husband to rid himself of a faithless, quarrelsome, or childless wife by thrice pronouncing the word talak, subject only to the restitution of dower. I have heard young Mussulmani women admit in open court, in the presence of Hindus to whom such a confession must have been even more shocking than to ourselves, that they had been married by the neka ceremony, and divorced, three and four times over. Finally, to leave out many other interesting varieties of marriage customs, which, though allowed, are perhaps not sufficiently studied by our legislators, there are the strict rules of the Hindus, who marry boy and girl together, and suffer no divorce and no second marriage even when death has, for this world at least, parted husband and wife. Under all these varied institutions (chiefly, it must be remembered, polygamous) I have met many happy couples many loving and self-sacrificing parents; but I am bound to say that, on the whole, my impression is that marriage is more often a success among the Hindus, who know that they must make the best of what is often a bad business, than among sects whose tenets allow divorce and re-marriage. I believe most careful observers of Indian customs will agree that my impression, unsupported though it necessarily is by statistical proof, is a correct one.

To return to my second point of view, that of an Englishman not unhappily married, in spite of the necessity of frequent and prolonged separation from wife and children. Some of your more cynical correspondents may urge that the separations which Anglo-Indians regard as one of the gravest drawbacks of Eastern life conduce to happiness. Unfortunately, the records of the divorce court tell a different tale; but I do say that where common sense and mutual consideration exist these trials, as well as the various drawbacks of poverty, large families, and other evils of which your correspondents complain, do but strengthen and enhance married affection. If a wife or a husband be fickle, self-indulgent, and weak, absence affords an opportunity for sin. If they be constant and self-respecting, absence makes the heart grow fonder.

Even when we come to the graver hindrances to married happiness, I doubt if divorce and the licence to marry again are good remedies. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred of unhappy marriages, it is not the system, but the persons, who are to blame; and, moreover, they are the very persons who would take advantage of a laxer system to perpetrate fresh blunders. If we are to have any changes, let them not be such as will encourage youth, already too prone to yield to impulse and passion, to defend an unwise choice by the argument that it is not irrevocable.

Let men or women have the option of separation from partners who are drunken, insane, or released gaol-birds; but as they have been married once, and have found the experiment a failure, let them be contented to have escaped so easily. Individual cases of hardship there will be under all systems of interference with liberty, and marriage must always be an interference with liberty. I may be permitted to doubt whether any change of system will conduce to the greater happiness of the greatest number of married people.—Yours, &c.,

London, Sept. 6.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—I read with interest the letter of "Constance D.," and do not wonder that she or any other bride of refined taste should be shocked by the "hideous candour" of parts of the marriage service of the Anglican Church. It must also make a man of refinement feel dreadfully uncomfortable. I have been married ten years, but fortunately escaped the trying ordeal that "Constance D." had to face, as I was married in the United States, and the marriage service in the American prayer-books has not these objectionable parts in it. It is written more in the spirit of the age we live in, and not in the style of past centuries. The impression the service made on me was, that we were married for mutual society, help, and comfort. The little word so much objected to is in the American service, but neither bride nor bridegroom takes it as being meant seriously.—I am, &c., A HAPPY WIFE.

Kensington, W., Sept. 7.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—In your remarkable correspondence concerning marriage there have been several references to our marriage service to its "hideous candour." I am a clergyman, and I never hesitate when officiating at a wedding to cut the service down, and to omit the offensive allusions. If the authorities will not revise this aspect of the Prayer Book for us, we can do so for ourselves.—Yours,

NOVUS CURATUS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—In your issue of to-day "An Experienced Lover" condemns lady clerks—as knowing nothing whatever of housekeeping. Allow me to contradict that statement. I myself am thoroughly domesticated, having learnt all that is necessary in that respect from my mother, before I took a situation as "cashier." As there are so many hundreds of lady clerks in England at present, it is really necessary for "An Experienced Lover" to understand that our ideas are not entirely confined to "cashbooks and ledgers."—Yours, &c., CHESNUT.

Manchester, Sept. 8.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—Three conspicuous instances of a happy marriage were very aptly noted by one of your correspondents, amongst them being Bishop Wilberforce and Archbishop Tait. May I venture to add that of another public man Lord Chancellor Hatherley, better known as Sir William Page Wood. Those who follow the law will remember his high standing as a judge, when suitors flocked to his court (while acting as Vice-Chancellor) from the knowledge that fewer of his judgments were upset upon appeal than those of any other judge of his time. Those who follow politics will remember the words of his great political opponent, Earl Cairns, that, "it was not too much to say that as a judge, as a Christian, as a gentleman, and as a man, this country has not seen, and probably will not see, any one who is his superior."

Lord Hatherley's resistance to the legalisation of marriage with a deceased wife's sister is well known. The blessing of his own married life of forty-two years may be gathered from the following sonnet, composed by him during his temporary blindness, after undergoing an operation for cataract, being one of his annual productions on the birthday of his wife:

"Sept. 12, 1872.

"Dear wife, what need to gaze upon thy face?
For every line is graven on my heart
More truly than the sun or painter's art
Have e'er availed thy lineaments to trace;
And nothing in this life shall e'er efface
That tender beaming look of pure delight
Which told me of my new and precious right
To clasp thee in my first and long embrace.
Tho' for a time a dim suffusion veil
My mortal sight, it cannot from the soul
The memory of that blessed look remove.
Only with life such memory shall fail,
And then, released from this poor frame's control,
Still shall the spirit joy in thy sweet love."

Seven years afterwards, writing again his annual sonnet on her birthday (the first that occurred after losing her), his testimony to what is possible in married life will interest your readers of all classes:

"Sept. 12, 1879.

"We count not now thy course by days or years;
Thou dwellest in the never-setting day
Where all is holy, beautiful, and gay,
Thy cheek unfurrow'd by the track of tears,
Thy sins all pardon'd, and thy reverent fears
Hush'd in the bosom of a pardoning God!
He watch'd the pathway which thy footsteps trod,
And still for me the Cross, his standard, rears
Low at its foot, I fall, in earnest prayer
That my poor yearly offering of love
Be such as Christ Himself may deign to bless;
Content, meanwhile, alone my grief to bear,
And sure that, should thy spirit from above
See all my faults, it cannot love me less."

Your obedient servant, NOT A FAILURE.

London, Sept. 7, 1888.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—Will you allow me to express a Catholic view regarding the question, "Is Marriage a Failure?" In so doing I will first quote the words of Bishop Dupanloup on the subject of marriage. "Marriage," says that distinguished orator, "is a great and august sacrament. (Eph. v. 32.) It is, therefore, not merely an ordinary and profane convention, a natural and passing mutual feeling, a capricious and uncertain partnership; no, it is a sacrament. Whilst God himself intervenes as a witness, as a judge and avenger of this sacred contract, the Christian husband and wife banish for ever any lukewarmness, which would be an outrage, any dislike, which would be perjury, any unfaithfulness, which would be a sacrilege. Among the happy things of this world, which has so few of them, and of the rare spectacles of happiness to which the sight of Heaven has not been denied, I know of none more touching and more beautiful than the sight of a Christian young man and the bride of his choice both kneeling at the foot of the same altar and humbly receiving from the hand of God the blessing upon their alliance. It is then that religion, by ennobling in the name of virtue itself the strongest and sweetest of affections, transforms these by anticipation into the source of comforts in the bitter troubles of life, and then the same religion, alternately grave and indulgent, benign and austere, unites the betrothed couple with ties that only death can sever, and, having received their solemn promises of fidelity, it affords them the example to abide by its side and under its influence, pure joys and innocent pleasures, and when the time of enchantment and romance has passed it converts these into deep and true affection and all the happiness arising from a chaste union and holy companionship. Religion does yet more; it reveals to the Christian spouses that their union here below is only a figure of that far more delightful union in heaven, whence all anxieties, dark clouds and painful separation are for ever banished." Let that religion which inspires such sentiments and affords the means of such conjugal happiness be made the basis of the education of the young by gaining an entrance into all our public schools, and I will warrant that the question "Is Marriage a Failure?" will soon become an anachronism. The interference with these Divine institutions, the so-called reformation of what our Lord and Redeemer has established for the best of His creatures, will always lead to confusion, disorder, and misery. I am, Sir, yours obediently, A CATHOLIC.

East Dulwich, Sept. 6.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—I am somewhat surprised that none of your correspondents seem to give a thought to the number of second marriages among widowers and widows alike. Surely if marriage is the "failure" it is said to be, neither man nor woman would so frequently "repeat the dose." It has been said that the greatest compliment a man can pay his deceased wife is to marry again, as in the majority of instances it is a proof of the happiness of the wedded state. If this is true, it would be interesting to know what is the relative proportion of re-marriages to that of marriages among bachelors and spinsters. This I presume could be ascertained from the registrar, and would, I think, go far to settle the question at issue. Yours faithfully,

Scarborough, Sept. 7. TWICE MARRIED.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—If your readers will peruse or reperuse Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" they will find much that bears on the present discussion. They will see that we are going through the same political and social phases as preceded that event. The analogy is especially great with respect to the present question, the raising of woman to a platform Nature never intended her to occupy, her emancipation from control, her lavishness and luxury, and the enormous facility for divorce.

MEDICUS SEPTUAGENARIUS.

Fulham, S.W., Sept. 5.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—Your correspondent "A Retired Physician" is evidently labouring under a wrong impression when he says, "Take, for instance, the bank clerk, who marries on a pound or 30s per week," as it is contrary to the rules of any respectable banking house to allow men to marry unless in receipt of £150 per annum.—Yours, &c.,

East Dulwich, S.E., Sept. 6. BANK CLERK.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—Will you allow me, through the medium of your columns, to reply to the complaint addressed to you by "Scottish Widow," and to correct an error into which she has not unnaturally fallen. The word "dower" signifies the portion which, by the common law, a woman has, on the death of her husband, for the term of her natural life in his lands and tenements. This portion is generally a third, but by custom it may be half a moiety. The right of dower, provided the wife's conduct did not forfeit all claim to it, attached to all the husband's lands and tenements of which he was seized, and which the wife may have had issue which might have been heir (Litt. SS 36, 53); but the husband might declare at the time of marriage whether he meant to dower out of all his lands and tenements, or of special lands only. Glanvil tells us that the most usual form of dower was the dower ad ostium ecclesiæ (at the church porch), where the husband came to endow his wife specially or generally—specially, as when the husband, "after alliance made and troth plighted," declared out of what lands and tenements his wife was to dower, and generally, as when the husband standing in the church porch said, "With all my lands and tenements I thee endow," the lands became liable to her dower. But when the husband endowed his wife with personal property only, he said, "With all my worldly goods" (or according to the Salisbury ritual "With all my worldly chattel") "I thee endow," and this entitled the wife to her thirds of his personal estate, or pars rationabilis as it was usually called. This pars rationabilis was provided for by Magna Charta, c. 26, and the expression used in our present Liturgy has no meaning or efficacy whatever beyond perhaps the moral obligation under which it lays the husband to provide for his wife during his lifetime. I think "Scottish Widow" must have jumbled together "worldly goods" and "real property." If not she should be well contented, seeing that a widow is only entitled to dower to the extent of one-third of her husband's personal estate, otherwise "worldly goods."—Yours truly,

EDWIN C. NORTON.

Essex-street, Strand, Sept. 8.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—I should like to ask Mrs. Mona Caird and the crowd of strong-minded, unwomanly females who uphold her, why they need raise such a typhoon in the cause of "Free Love," when, if they are so inclined, they are free to live in that debasing state for as long or as short a period as they like, as there is no law to prevent them; and, if they are so numerous as they try to make out, and I are sure that they are right, why need they care for the opinion of the sentimental minority? Because, forsooth, they know that it would be wrong, they want the Legislature to throw a kind of cloak over the wrong by making it lawful in the sight of society. I am thankful to see from the many letters which have appeared in The Daily Telegraph that there are too many true English girls and matrons to allow such a debasing state as "Free Love" to become general.

I remember a shipmate of mine who, when we were battling with the wind and waves thousands of miles from Old England, would fetch out a photograph of his wife and five children in the first dog watch, and, looking at it with pride, would say to me, "There you are, Harry, that's worth living for, and I'm proud of it!" and when I look at these dear faces I think I to [illegible] "Free Love" is no more like marriage than a Chinese junk is like a full-rigged British ship.—I remain yours sincerely, VICTOR.

Stoke-on-Trent, Sept. 6.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—As a clergyman whose years amount to nearly half a century I fully sympathise with the young bride as to her feelings of shame when the marriage service of our Church is read in full. I have never when officiating read certain objectionable passages in the marriage service, and never intend to do so, though I have been present when they have been read, and I must confess, as an old married man neither "squeamish nor mock modest," that I have felt most uncomfortable myself, which feeling has also been shared by the majority of persons present. As the objectionable portion can be omitted without impugning the legality of the marriage, I ask the parents or the bridegroom to ask the officiating minister to omit those passages.—I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

Ipswich, Sept. 8. ANTI-LEONARD.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—The defenders of the "innocent babes" of unmarried women all unite in clamouring for the removal of the "unjust stain and stigma" which is supposed to be affected by permitting them—after, I presume, an exhaustive inquiry to prevent imposture—to assume the name of their male parent. An equally undeserved stigma rests, also, on the equally innocent babe of the convicted felon, but would any one suggest an attempt to remove this unmerited disgrace by Act of Parliament? That the sins of the fathers shall be visited on the children is simply the expression of one of the most immutable of nature's laws, and, say what we will, we strive against the sentence in vain. I would suggest, too, that the practical disabilities of a person born out of wedlock are extremely insignificant. He is shut out from no profession, from no occupation of any description, from the possibility of no honours the State can bestow. He can inherit property if his father desires to leave it him, and even a lawful son can be disinherited at his father's will and pleasure. He can will his own property to whom he pleases. He may bear any name he thinks proper, and the law and the world alike will freely admit his right to call himself what he pleases. The whole question is beset with endless difficulties. The only attempt during modern civilisation to place the offspring of such parents on a legal equality with the children of marriage occurred during the wild frenzy and unbridled license of the French Revolution. And even at that period, at a time when every restraint of religion and morality was laid aside, the experiment does not seem to have been attended with such success as to recommend its adoption by cool-headed and decent-minded Englishmen.—I remain, Sir, yours truly,

Bournemouth, Sept. 7. BONOS MORES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—You would earn a heartfelt blessing from many a mother with aching heart if your ably supported paper, with the help of your numerous correspondents, should lead to passing a long required law, viz., making illegitimate children legitimate on their mother's marriage with the father. Why should the sins of the parents be visited upon the innocent children. If not, indeed, marriage in our case must remain a failure.

Kensington, S.W., Sept. 6. INWARD GRIEF.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—I am an American, and a Democrat at that, but have taken a great interest in the marriage question as discussed in your columns. Will you permit me to say that, in my humble opinion, the man who is too proud or unwise to marry a girl who has money is a donkey, and entitled to our fullest scorn. As George Ryan, a well-known American humorist once said, "It is just as easy to fall in love with a girl who owns a brown stone front as with one who has eighty-ought."

I have now in my mind's eye two friends in my native town of Union Springs, whose married lives furnish me with ample testimony on this point. The one, a handsome young fellow of a rather sentimental temperament, fell in love with a pretty face, and at twenty married the village beauty. He has a large family of children, and, on a meagre income, barely keeps the wolf from his door, and with his wife drags out what might almost be called a miserable existence. The other, more stolid and phlegmatic, at forty-five married a childless widow with a handsome property. His portly, well-kept figure and his laughing face tell the story of his happy married life, and his home is, indeed, a model one, and a spot to be envied. As for myself, my wife and I were both blessed with a competence, and after the labours of the day it is a matter of great moment that can lure me from my own fireside. To me there is no place like home.—Yours truly,

JAMES CARNEGIE STOUT.

Montague-place, Sept. 7.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—As illustrating the (to us moderns) curious ideas of marriage which have obtained during the age of chivalry, the following extract from Demogeot's "French Literature," page 141, may not be without interest to the readers of the controversy now proceeding in your columns. After describing the constitution of the Courts of Love, and the nature of the questions debated before them, and stating the great respect with which their decisions were received, M. Demogeot mentions, as a "novel example" of question, the following:—"L'amour peut-il exister entre légitimes époux?" This question, he shudders to say, was answered in the negative by a court which gave this decision consisted of sixty of the noblest ladies in the land, assisted by knights learned in the laws of love, and presided over by the Countess of Champagne.—I am, yours truly,

Stoke Newington, Sept. 6. J. F.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—With the desire to bring about some practical good in regard to the important question raised by your journal, "Is Marriage a Failure?" might I be permitted to suggest, as bases of action: 1st, that the marriage laws be immediately reformed so that proof of insanity, habitual drunkenness, or brutality on either part shall be sufficient for a divorce; 2nd, that no person who is a criminal offender, insane, or an habitual drunkard, be permitted to rear children; but that such parents, or persons, be compelled to pay for their support and be brought up and educated by the State.—Your obedient servant, DEEDS NOT WORDS.
